Vatican Awaiting Word On Russian Council Envoy

Vatican City - (UPI) - The Vatican announced today it sent an envoy to Moscow to give "verbal information" about the Ecumenical Council to the Russian Orthodox church but that no decision has been made on whether the Russians will send an observer to the historic event.

The brief announcement, released through the council's press office, said, "the eventual sending of a further delegate to the council rests with the Holy Synod of the Russian church."

The communiqué, first to be issued by the newly opened press office, said the envoy to Moscow was Msgr. John Willibrands, the Dutch-born secretary of the Secretariat for the Promotion of Christian Unity. He was in Moscow from Sept. 27 to Oct. 2. There was as yet no indication, however, that the Russian Orthodox church would send an observer or guest to the council.

In Moscow, a Russian Orthodox spokesman confirmed Willibrands' visit but said Orthodox representatives were not invited to the council.

News of the Vatican's move in Russia followed Pope John XXIII's hour-long meeting Monday with Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński and 13 bishops from communist-run Poland.

Communist Hungary and

Red-held East Germany also allowed Catholic bishops and clergymen to come to the council, the first gathering of its kind in almost a century.

About 50 observers and guests from non-Catholic Christian religions are also attending the meeting along with almost 3,000 Roman churchmen - cardinals, archbishops, bishops, abbots and leaders of religious orders.

Pope John, who called for the council on Jan. 25, 1959, said one of its main aims is to bring the church "into step with modern times."

Campaign Dinners Add $560,000 To GOP Fund Coeffers

San Francisco - (UPI) - California Republicans hoped today a brief but warm reunion of the old team of "Ike and Dick" would spark Richard Nixon's campaign for governor to victory.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, hale and hearty as he nears his 72nd birthday, staged a one-day campaign Monday in Los Angeles and San Francisco to help his one-time running mate in a do-or-die campaign against Democratic incumbent Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Eisenhower was the star of the show at a $100-a-plate dinner attended by 3,000 Republicans in the Cow Palace - the same place where the two men were nominated for a second time in 1956 to head the Republican ticket.

Nixon, meanwhile, was the guest of honor at another $100-a-plate affair in the Hollywood Palladium where some 2,000 turned out, among them celebrities James Stewart, Pat Boone, Tony Martin and Jayne Mansfield. Including companion dinners in San Bernardino and Bakersfield, the Ike-Nixon show added $560,000 to the GOP campaign coffers.

Ride in Parade

But before the banquets, the two men appeared together in a ticker tape parade through San Francisco's financial district - a show that brought back memories of 1952 and 1956.

Despite the rival attraction of a World Series game in New York between the Yankees and the San Francisco Giants, a crowd estimated by Asst. Police Chief Al Nelder at more than 120,000 lined the streets to cheer "Ike and Dick." Many of the spectators waved at the two men with one hand while clamping a transistor radio close to their ear with the other.

Eisenhower was in top form in his Cow Palace speech and he praised Nixon in almost every possible way.

In his eight years as vice president, Eisenhower said, Nixon was a "great American voice on the world scene."

"He proved himself an able leader, an outstanding executive, a public servant in the finest American tradition."

Admits to Mistake
Eisenhower told the Cow Palace crowd that he felt one of his biggest political mistakes was not working harder for Nixon in 1960 when Nixon lost the presidency by John F. Kennedy by the narrowest of margins.

But, he said, he is going "all out for Dick Nixon" this time in his battle against Brown.

"I have full faith in the man," Eisenhower said. "I endorse him 100 per cent. Regardless of where I lived in the United States, I would be proud to have Richard Nixon as my governor."

Eisenhower's warm endorsement met with an affectionate reply from Nixon whose speech was linked to the Cow Palace by closed circuit television.

"We thank him for coming to California," said Nixon. "We thank him for giving us the best eight years of progress with peace we have had in this century."

Nixon refused to let Eisenhower take the blame for his defeat in 1960.

"We failed by an eyelash," he said. "But I as the candidate am solely responsible for that."

Riots Reported In Soviet Union

Washington - (UPI) - U.S. officials said Monday they have received reports of large-scale riots in a southern industrial section of the Soviet Union.

There were unconfirmed reports that between several dozen and several hundred people were killed in the most serious outbreak, in Novocherkassk, near Rostov.

Officials said the rioting reportedly began after butter and meat prices were raised on June 1.

The State Department would say only that "we have had reports there were disturbances in the Rostov area this summer."

U.S. officials said privately that a curfew was imposed in the area July 12 to keep youngsters under 16 off the streets at night, and during large parts of the summer the area was closed to foreigners, including Western diplomats.

Soviet officials at one time attributed this as a "cholera epidemic."

Three-State Reapportionment Parley Slated for Oct. 26-27 in Portland

By United Press International
A political conference on reapportionment, with delegates from three Western states that will vote on it, will be held in Portland two weeks before the November election.

The conference was announced by a group opposing Oregon's ballot measure - the Bipartisan League to Retain Equal Representation.

Legislators, campaign workers, political scientists and other delegates from Washington, Oregon and California will participate in the discussions and workshops Oct. 26-27.

Washington and California will vote on proposals to apportion seats in their legislatures more on the basis of population and less on the basis of area.

Oregon will do the opposite. Oregon voters, whose legislative seats now are handed out on a population basis, will consider a proposal to take land area into account as well. In other political activity, State Rep. Carl Fisher called at Grants Pass Monday night for a "lumber bloc" in Congress to deal with problems of the forest products industry as they arise.

Fisher, the Republican nominee for Congress in the fourth district, said if Northwest Senators and Congressmen "would set aside their political differences they could become a potent team."

Sig Unander, the Republican senatorial candidate, also was in Grants Pass Monday. He spoke at Willamette University in Salem today and advocated American recognition and military support of a Cuban government in exile to overthrow the Castro regime. He also predicted the White House would soon issue a "Kennedy Doctrine" on Cuba which, he forecast, would be "ambiguous" in content.

In Portland, Republican congressional candidate Stan Hartman criticized Democratic Rep. Edith Green for loss of funds for deepening the Columbia river ship channel. He called it an example of Mrs. Green's "weak efforts, and inability to get anything done for Oregon."
