

Ex-Jacksonville Minister Dies

The Rev. Samuel H. Jones, 90, fourth minister to serve the pioneer Presbyterian church at Jacksonville, died Oct. 9 in Salem.

He served as minister of the Jacksonville church from 1898-1903 and from 1929-1937. He arrived in Jacksonville following his graduation in 1898 from the San Francisco Theological seminary and was ordained in Jacksonville Dec. 19, 1898.

When he first arrived at the church it had 38 members and an annual budget of $508. When he returned in 1929 he served the church until his retirement in April, 1937, when he moved to Salem.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Edna Price Jones, Salem, who visited in the Jacksonville area in July; one son, Malcolm L. Jones, Salem, and one grandson, Lundy Jones, also Salem.

Private funeral services will be held in Salem Thursday, Oct. 11, at 3:30 p.m. Dr. N. K. Tully, Salem, former minister of the Jacksonville and Central Point churches and now visitation minister of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate. Cremation will follow.

GREAT IMPOSTER—Ferdinand Waldo Demara, a corpulent, crop-haired man, better known as "The Great Imposter," who was portrayed in a movie version of his past masquerades by actor Tony Curtis, was found to have been running a home for wayward boys at Placerville, Calif. Demara, who has founded the "New Life Youth Ranch," wants it known that "The Great Imposter Is Dead" and that he has gone straight. He will be the subject of an on-the-spot investigation by the state department of welfare. (UPI)

Legionnaires Hear Kennedy Warn of Crisis

Las Vegas—UPI—AFL-CIO President George Meany was to deliver the principal address today at the 44th annual convention of the American Legion which Tuesday heard Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy warn of another possible crisis in Berlin.

Kennedy said, "It is quite possible that we will face a great crisis in Berlin in the weeks just ahead." He spoke at the national commander's dinner at the Flamingo Hotel.

The attorney general said Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev "knows without any doubt, we are prepared to defend our vital interests and those of the West with all the force at our command."

Kennedy said American military strength had increased and "we face the possible crisis with confidence."

The President's brother told the convention that "at this time, the only immediate guarantee of national safety lies in the adequacy of military strength — from nuclear weapons to guerrilla warfare — strength which continues to make military action by the Communists very unattractive and very irrational."

Also scheduled to address the convention today along with Meany were Gen. David M. Shoup, commander of the Marine Corps, and John C. Satterfield, former president of the American Bar association.

Astronaut Alan B. Shepard made an appearance to respond to a legion presentation to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and Bell Laboratories saluting project Telstar, the world's active communications satellite.

Former President Harry S. Truman arrives today for a speech Thursday. As the great convention that has attracted an estimated 30,000 persons to this desert gambling resort moved into its second day, the business of preparing resolutions and other matters moved into high gear.

Election of new officers does not come until Thursday, but there was plenty of behind-the-scenes action. FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover called on the legion in a keynote address Tuesday to continue its fight against communism, and called for a "moral reawakening in every home of our country." He termed crime a "sinister partner" of the international conspiracy of communism in breaking down the moral fiber of America.

ADDRESSES ASSEMBLY—Algerian Premier Ahmed Ben Bella is shown as he addressed the UN General Assembly in a speech marking his country's admission to the world organization. Ben Bella restated his government's determination to stay in the non-aligned camp. He also said Algeria has resolved to give "unconditional" aid to nationalists fighting to "liberate" Angola, Rhodesia, South Africa and South West Africa. (UPI)

New York School Trains Rangers

By DAVID H. HASKELL United Press International Wanakena, N. Y.—UPI—Today, in a pine-needle scented forest in the western Adirondack mountains, where 50 years ago there were only charred stumps that once had been trees, stands the New York State Ranger school.

On this spot a half-century ago this fall, the school's founder, J. Otto Hamele of Wanakena, conceived an experiment to make this logged-over, burned-out area live again.

That experiment blossomed into the 2,300-acre Ranger school—the oldest of its kind in the western hemisphere. It celebrated its golden anniversary recently by dedicating a new building wing.

The new wing will allow enrollment to increase 50 per cent, up to 100 students annually—a far cry from September, 1912, when the school's first director, P. T. Colledge of Bangor, Maine, welcomed the first students.

Colledge and his students built the first housing, hauling the needed materials by boat from Wanakena up the Oswegatchie river to the school's site on an arm of Cranberry lake. It was next to impossible to transport anything by land.

But the school-part of the state university College of Forestry at Syracuse university—no longer is isolated in the wilderness. State highway route 3 runs through the hamlet of Wanakena, some 60 miles northeast from Watertown.

Aside from technical aspects, life hasn't changed much for students since those early days. They average 30 to 60 hours of work and study each week, half of which is spent in field work.

Life in the field is part of nearly every day during the 44-week course, which starts in March and ends with graduation for those who withstand the rugged pace in mid-February.

Outdoor Experience A fleet of canoes is maintained by the school to carry work crews to sites along the 165 miles of lake and river shoreline. There's still a lot of tramping through the woods, however, for each student must gain experience under conditions he will meet in actual practice.

But all is not work, despite the tight time schedule. In the vicinity are opportunities for fishing, boating, canoeing, camping, hiking, snow-shoe-

Plans for 12 Houses Submitted To City

The D. L. Pickell real estate firm has submitted plans for 12 residences to the city building department for checking prior to the issuing of building permits, according to O. R. McNeel, building safety director.

The houses, seven to be constructed on Mace rd., two nearby on Howard ave. and one on Stevens st., will be single family dwellings. McNeel explained that this is an unusually high number to be submitted the department at one time by one firm.

Today the department issued a permit to the same firm for the erection of another residence valued at $9,500 at 1159 Stevens st.

Tax Commission Office Relocates

The Medford district office of the Oregon state tax commission has moved to its new office at 108 North Grape st. It was formerly located at 124 West Fourth st. in the same structure as the Jackson county welfare department.

This is the second move for the local office in recent years. When the new office building was erected on West Fourth st. it moved its offices from the Leverette building on West Main st.

The new location is the north half of the former showroom of Dean and Taylor company. The telephone number 773-8258 will remain the same as will the mailing address, post office box 972.

Fisherman Catches Danish Submarine

Plymouth, England—UPI—NATO officials came to the aid of fishing captain Stanley Drake today and confirmed he had made one of the biggest catches on record—a submarine.

Drake had told skeptical friends that he was reeling in his trawler nets off Plymouth Monday when he felt a huge strain on the winch. He pulled harder and pretty soon up popped a Danish submarine, thoroughly emeshed.

NATO officials said the submarine had been lying off Plymouth during a NATO sea exercise and Drake's nets wrapped around its superstructure.

Rather than rip the nets, the sub captain decided to surface and give the fisherman the surprise of his life. The two skippers exchanged apologies, the sub submerged and Drake went back to smaller game.
