

Connally Said Running Scared For Governorship of Texas

By PATRICK CONWAY
Dallas — (UPI) — John Connally, President Kennedy's first secretary of the Navy, is running hard and scared for the governorship of Texas.

One look at the political polls tells Democrat Connally he has a two year lease on the governor's mansion in Austin. But a closer look at the voters tells him he still may be living in his hometown at Fort Worth after the votes are counted.

Much depends on what Connally does between now and the Nov. 6 general election.

One big mistake and a Democrat — turned — Republican named Jack Cox could be Texas' first GOP governor since Reconstruction. It is a battle of personalities.

A Smooth Talker
Connally is gray, handsome, and a smooth talker. Cox is wiry, determined and a smooth talker.

Talk may be the deciding factor. Texans were exposed to the Kennedy - Nixon debate, and they liked the show. Since then television stations have been after Connally and Cox to debate. Cox says "yes," Connally "no."

Connally is one of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson's closest confidantes. Cox is using this against him. Cox is the former executive director of the conservative group "Freedom in Action." Connally uses this as a political weapon.

The GOP, maneuvering for the liberal Texas vote by promoting the two-party system, keeps whacking Johnson. They have distributed an automobile bumper sticker which reads — "Scratch Lyndon's boy John," with the capital letters "LBJ" in glowing print.

Intense City Organizer
Connally, an attorney for the late wheeler-dealer Sid Richardson and a former oil and gas lobbyist in Washington, maintains he is independent from Vice President Johnson.

But his campaign style is patterned after the vice president's — he is a hand-shaker, a "howdy-do-er" in the country clubs, and an intense organizer in the cities.

Cox looks just like he crawled off an oil well drilling rig, which is his business.

ness. He has won awards for his speeches about American heritage. He likes to pick up a guitar and strum a Western tune.

This tactic has been known to win election in Texas. Elsewhere in the Southwest.

Oklahoma: Republicans are making a determined bid in Oklahoma, the Democratic stronghold of Sen. Robert Kerr, to elect Henry Bellmon as governor. It would be an upset victory for the 41-year-old farmer from Billings.

The Democratic choice, and favorite at this time, is W. P. (Bill) Atkinson, 55, a builder and housing developer who had to fight down to the wire to beat former Gov. Raymond Gary.

Gary refused to campaign for Atkinson after the recount, but said he supports the Democratic ticket. Their quarrel was over a sales tax — a levy Atkinson proposes to increase from two to three cents.

An independent, L. Richard Zavits of Tulsa, also is on the ballot for governor.

A. S. (Mike) Monroney, incumbent junior senator, faces 40-year-old Republican B. Hayden Crawford of Tulsa and Paul V. Beck, 71, a Tulsa independent.

There are contests for only four of the six congressional seats. No Republican filed against either Rep. Carl Albert, Democratic House member.

majority leader, or Rep. Tom Steed, and both automatically win reelection.

New Mexico: The "Land of Enchantment" is a question mark as far as the November gubernatorial election is concerned.

It is a battle between two former FBI agents in a state where Democrats outnumber Republicans 2½ to 1, but where Gov. Edwin Mechem, a Republican, has served four consecutive terms and is fighting for a fifth.

The major issue is the state's deficit. Mechem urges a tax increase. The Democrats oppose it.

Mechem won with a big smile and a "just call me big Ed" approach.

His opponent is Jack Campbell, who appears to have voter appeal. Like Mechem, he is a former FBI agent. Further, he was a combat Marine in the Pacific, former state House speaker and has proved to be an effective campaigner.

Arkansas: Gov. Orval E. Faubus, toned down and more moderate since his battle with the federal government over school integration in 1957, swamped the Democratic field to win the nomination without a runoff and is all but assured of an unprecedented fifth term.

Willis Ricketts, Fayetteville Republican, is his opponent, but is given little or no chance to unseat Faubus.

Veteran Democratic Sen. J. William Fulbright was an overwhelming favorite to beat Dr. Kenneth Goss Jones, 43, a Little Rock Conservative Republican, in a senatorial contest.

Louisiana: Sen. Russell Long, son of Huey (The Kingfish) and nephew of Earl, appears to face little trouble in his race for a third term and another member of the Long clan has appeared on the scene.

Russell's cousin — Gillis Long — is making a bid for a seat in Congress — and odds are that he will win.

Rep. Otto Passman, the congressman who prides himself in ax-work on foreign aid programs, has no opposition. Rep. Hale Boggs, another fixture in the House, had a tough primary fight but coasts from here on in.

Morse Credited For Project Money

Portland — (UPI) — Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) has credited Oregon's Sen. Wayne Morse with winning a lion's share of public works money for Oregon.

Douglas said Oregon got some $72 million this year — about $45 per person — compared to a national average of about $7.50 per person.

"You can't say somebody is doing nothing when he does things like that," he said.

Douglas spoke on a campaign swing through Oregon on behalf of Morse.

Keeping Cost of OTI Campus at $6 Million Urged

Salem — (UPI) — The State Emergency Board has recommended that cost of Oregon Technical Institute's new campus at Klamath Falls be held to the $6 million envisioned.

The action came on a motion by State Rep. Clarence Barton (D - Coquille) after higher education officials indicated that as of now, estimates place the cost of the new campus over a four-year period at $8,225,000.

Dr. Roy E. Lieualten, chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, said he has always understood that the $6 million figure was "an estimate, not a limitation."

If it is a limitation, he added, there could be some "unpleasant consequences" for the campus buildings to be constructed. Costs are running higher on a number of buildings, he said.

At the same time, the board approved preliminary plans for two projects for the new OTI campus — a physical plant building, and an instructional shop building.

Barton said if the campus is going to cost more than $6 million, then it is up to the 1963 legislature to appropriate the money.

Present plans call for the new campus to open in the fall of 1964.

Senate President Harry Boivin (D - Klamath Falls), board chairman, suggested that Lieualten and his staff reevaluate plans for remaining OTI buildings to see if any savings can be made. He also said he doubted if the next legislature would object to appropriating the extra $225,000 needed.

CONFERENCE SLATED
Washington — (UPI) — President Kennedy and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer will confer here early next month in an effort to close ranks in the face of an anticipated new Berlin crisis.

The AEC said Joint Task Force Eight authorities in Honolulu had decided to delay the shot for one day.

The test was to take place over Johnston Island, one of the U. S. test areas in the Pacific.

Invitation To Opening of Salon Mistaken for Saloon Invitation

By DICK WEST

Washington — (UPI) — My invitation to attend the gala opening of the new Lilly Dache salon here probably was a mistake. I know that my acceptance was I thought it said "saloon."

Somehow I had Lilly Dache, the famed designer, who was a lily of another valley. But I had a gala time anyway.

If Miss Dache thought she could influence me by inviting me up to the salon, parading beautiful models before me and playing me with champagne, she was right.

I'll stake my reputation as an international fashion expert that her creations will be the hit of the season.

But if other designers would like to compete for my endorsement, I'm available, in other words, girls, I can be had.

One model appeared in a creation that appeared to have been created by cross-pollinating an Army pup tent with the Dalai Lama's nightshirt.

"What is that you have on, my child?" I asked when she swished around to my vicinity.

"It's a housecoat, sir," she said.

"Does the furniture come with it?" I inquired.

She instantly evaporated and reappeared at the other end of the room.

Later on, I asked Miss Dache what had inspired the creation.

"Eet ees for relaxation," said Miss Dache, whose French accent survived a stint as a salesgirl at Macy's. "Eet ees for a woman to be herself in."

There certainly was plenty of room for a woman to be herself in. In fact, she could be three other people and still not be crowded.

A rather squatly built lady who accompanied me to the opening complained that Miss Dache's creations seemed to favor tall women.

Miss Dache was quick to enter a rebuttal.

Slipping off her shoes and hat, she revealed that she herself is a towering five-foot-two.

"You have to add a little at the bottom and a little at the top," she said, flourishing the accessories.

It was an academic issue anyhow. I couldn't afford her creations if they had been designed by pygmies.

As we were leaving, I overheard two women discussing the figure of a third, who apparently was a bit on the portly side.

"With a figure like that," one of them said, "she should have her clothes designed at Vic Tanny's."

Winnie Ruth Judd Still Being Sought

Phoenix — (UPI) — Escaped trunk murderer Winnie Ruth Judd, 57, remained at large today with a six-day search failing to turn up any trace of the notorious "tiger woman" of the 1930s who fled the Arizona State Mental Hospital a week ago.

Mrs. Judd, convicted of murder for the 1931 slaying of her two roommates, apparently walked out of the hospital through an unlocked door in her seventh escape attempt since being committed to the institution in 1932.

She was originally sentenced to hang for the murder of Hedwig Samuelson and Ann Lerol, whose bodies she shipped to Los Angeles in a trunk, but was ruled insane 72 hours before her execution and committed to the hospital.
