

Power Being Restored Gradually After Northwest Storm

STORM DAMAGE — Two Portland Park Bureau workmen are shown in the upper photo bucking up a fallen tree after a devastating storm swept through the area Friday. Crews worked throughout the week to clear wreckage and restore services. Some areas of Portland still do not have telephone or power services. In the lower photo an unlucky motorist tries to push his car out of flood waters accumulated at the foot of the Nimitz Freeway near the Judson Steel plant at Oakland, Calif. Traffic in the background was being held until waters in the foreground subsided. (UPI)

Language Discrimination Alleged in Belgian Rioting

Brussels — (AP) — Dozens of persons were injured Sunday in rioting between Flemish and French-speaking Belgians deeply split over accusations of linguistic and cultural discrimination.

Mounted police using the flat of their sabers charged into the battling crowds and arrested a total of 41 persons. One policeman was among the 12 persons treated in hospitals.

Police reported one demonstrator lost an eye. Dozens of others went home with cuts and bruises.

More than 150,000 Flemish-speaking Belgians, assembled from all over the country, marched 15 abreast for nearly three hours. They carried banners and lustily shouted slogans protesting alleged French-speaking domination of Brussels and economic and political discrimination against the Flemish throughout Belgium.

Fighting Erupts
Despite heavy police concentrations in the city, the Flemish soon clashed with French-speaking Walloon counter-demonstrators in a series of violent encounters.

The mayor of the French-speaking community of La Hulpe was among four persons injured when a metal container exploded among a group of Walloons.

Later, police arrested a French-speaking Belgian carrying a home-made hand grenade.

The rivalry between the two language groups is centuries old, but took on special meaning with the creation of modern Belgium in 1830.

North vs. South
Flemish, a Germanic tongue, is spoken in the northern provinces, including East and West Flanders.

French and its Walloon dialect are spoken in the south. The official Belgian languages are French and Dutch, which is similar to Flemish.

The Flemish complain that the current voting system discriminates against them, that bilingual administration is imposed in essentially Flemish areas and that French-speaking Belgians get the best government and private jobs in Brussels.

Wind Gauge at Yaquina Station Showed 120 MPH

By United Press International
Portland General Electric Co., serving much of Portland and 287,000 customers in the Willamette valley, said perhaps 90 per cent of its services would be restored today following Friday's devastating storm.

Pacific Power and Light had most of its Portland service restored Sunday night, but said valley and coast areas would take longer.

Bonneville Power Administration estimated losses at $1 to $2 million.

Hospitals used auxiliary power for a time.

Mimeographed Paper
The Daily Astorian published a mimeographed edition Saturday.

Some 1,000 National Guardsmen and state police were called out during the storm. Later, they guarded against looting.

During the blow, Coast Guardsmen at Yaquina evacuated their station after their wind gauge registered more than 120 mile limit of the gauge for five minutes.

In Portland, KGW-TV's 600-foot tower was a pile of twisted metal, putting the station off the air indefinitely. At Willamette, two steel trusses weighing five tons were blown 300 feet through the air to land on two homes.

Tillamook dairy farmer Steve Steiner lost 33 of his 57 cattle. A Dundee farmer lost 11 cattle, 1,000 chickens, two barns and four sheds.

Norblad's Home Damaged
A tree crushed the home of Rep. Walter Norblad (R-Ore.) at Stayton.

Initial reports indicated heavy damage to cabins in forest and coastal recreation areas.

Eight boys at MacLaren School for Boys at Woodburn took advantage of continuing darkness Saturday night to overpower a guard and flee.

A Portland glass distributor was swamped with more orders than it could handle. The firm was trying to divert extra shipments to Oregon.

Letter Questions Use of One Firm To Fly Prisoners

Sheriff Paul Bettiol said this morning that no one firm has a monopoly on transporting county prisoners by air.

Bettiol said he would talk to Pete Logan, Dark Hollow rd., about his letter to the county court questioning the sheriff's office giving "all the business" to Rogue Flying Service.

Bettiol said Rogue Flying Service had approached former Sheriff Joe Walsh several times. The other two charter flight services at the Medford airport, Aviation Service company and Valley Aviation, Inc., had not shown any interest in obtaining the sheriff's office business until fairly recently, Bettiol said.

A. A. Monroe, proprietor of Valley Aviation, said he had tried to talk to Walsh about flying prisoners for him, but had never been able to make connections.

Keldon G. Adams, Aviation Service company, said he had talked to a deputy about obtaining the sheriff's business but was told the plane charter business is on a bid basis.

Adams said he had never seen any bids, but may have missed the bid advertisement.

Under the present arrangement a sheriff's deputy flies the plane on an hourly basis charge.

SBA Offers Loans To Storm Victims

Washington — (AP) — The Small Business Administration today applied its "disaster area" designation to portions of California, Oregon and Washington which were hard hit by week end storms.

Such a designation permits home owners, businesses and other enterprises whose property has been damaged to apply at SBA field offices for loans. They carry a 3 per cent interest rate and are repayable over a period as long as 20 years.

SBA Administrator John E. Horne ordered an on-the-spot survey of storm damage in the area. He said reports received from SBA field offices indicated that major damage resulted from high winds, gales, flood, high tides and landslides during the Oct. 11-13 period.

DIES OF INJURIES

21-Gun Salute Welcomes Ben Bella at White House

Washington — (AP) — President Kennedy today welcomed Algerian Premier Ahmed Ben Bella at the White House with military pomp and glory, and the noisy squalls of Caroline Kennedy's kindergarten class.

It was the first time that the President staged his formal welcome of a chief of government on the spacious lawns of the White House. There even was a 21-gun salute, which has been used in the past at ceremonies at Washington's National Airport.

For Ben Bella, it was a far cry from the French prisons where he spent six years before emerging to take over leadership of the newly independent Algerian nation.

The unexpected addition to the spectacle was the noises of children's laughter and shouts, emerging from the third floor play school where Caroline and her friends were watching through the windows.

It had been planned that the President's daughter and her 20 playschool and kindergarten playmates could watch the honors from the balcony. But at the last moment the youngsters were kept indoors.

Kennedy kept a serious expression on his face as the children's voices could be heard mimicking the orders given during the military review. "Attention," shouted a little boy whose voice reverberated from the mansion. "Forward! March!"

Kennedy kept looking upward at the balcony as though expecting the children to come running out.

No agenda has been announced for the Kennedy-Ben Bella talks but there were indications the two leaders would touch upon possible U.S. aid to Algeria and Ben Bella's two-day visit to Cuba, which starts Tuesday.

In addition, Ben Bella has told aides that he especially wants to thank Kennedy for having had the "political courage" when he was a senator in 1957 to have demanded independence for Algeria. At the time, most of France's allies considered the conflict between France and her North African territory a "domestic affair."
