Lobby Planned By University Senate

By JAMES J. DOYLE
United Press International

Eugene, Ore. — Students at the University of Oregon want more attention from state legislators. And they plan to get it the way any other special interest does—by lobbying.

Representatives of the school's senate—an all-student body—have made plans for extensive lobbying at the 1963 session of the Oregon legislature in Salem.

It will be a case of senator lobbying senator, and the students are dead serious about getting legislation to further their aims. They have laid the groundwork already. In the outcome, they may teach the professionals something about lobbying in a businesslike fashion.

The University of Oregon Senate, with the cooperation of other state-supported schools, plans to send four representatives to the state assembly. Since they are students, and because the eyes of the faculty, parents and others will be on them, there will be no lobbying in the traditional sense—that is, no handouts, no drinks, no dinners—just business.

The students intend to achieve their ends by explaining, and by working with legislators and education committees.

Board Backing
In this they have the backing of the State Board of Higher Education. Among aims of the school body are: getting the best faculty possible; more money to operate a four-term year, more classrooms and lower tuitions.

The school senate feels this is the first time Oregon legislators have been lobbied by students of a state-supported institution. It may be the first time that any state legislature has been lobbied by students.

Supreme Court To Hear Challenge To Immigration Laws

Washington — The Supreme Court agreed today to hear a case challenging whether the McCarran-Walter Immigration Law unconstitutionally discriminates between naturalized and native-born citizens.

In a brief session on the third Monday of its fall term, the court decided to hear the appeal of Mrs. Angelika Schneider, fighting to retain status as a naturalized U. S. citizen despite extended residence in Germany.

In a brief session on the third Monday of its fall term, the court decided to hear the appeal of Mrs. Angelika Schneider, fighting to retain status as a naturalized U. S. citizen despite extended residence in Germany.

A lower court had ruled that she must forfeit her U. S. citizenship because she has lived more than three years in Germany, her native country.

Born in Bavaria
The McCarran-Walter Immigration Law of 1952 holds that a naturalized citizen forfeits his citizenship if he lives for three years in the country of his birth or for five years in any other country.

Mrs. Schneider was born in Bavaria in 1934, came to this country at age 5, and became a citizen at 16 when her mother was naturalized. After graduating from Smith college in 1954, she went to Europe. In Paris, she met a German attorney, Dieter Schneider. Now married, they live in Cologne with their three children.

In 1959, the U.S. Consulate in Dusseldorf asked her to surrender her naturalization certificate. She was later served with a "certificate of loss of nationality."

Equality Claimed
Mrs. Schneider contends this treatment is an unconstitutional discrimination between naturalized and native-born citizens. Her appeal said the immigration law "is the single substantive exception to the deeply rooted principle that native-born and naturalized citizens are equal in every respect."

She said her case may have wide application. Of 857,000 U. S. passports issued in 1961, the appeal said, about 105,000 were given to naturalized citizens.

In other actions, the court today:

— Denied a hearing on the Utah and Northern California Pharmaceutical associations which were found guilty of conspiring to fix retail drug prices. They had argued that the Sherman Antitrust Law, under which the cases were brought, does not apply to "the learned profession of pharmacy."

San Juan Is Inexpensive Historical Vacationland

By RALPH VILLERS
United Press International

San Juan, P. R. — Even a quick glance about the blue sea, palms, turing green mountains, luxury resort hotels, forgetful reminders of a four-centuries-old Spanish culture—and it's no longer a mystery why Puerto Rico has become the place to visit in the Caribbean.

For those who like to mix history with their relaxation, it is all about, but most impressively on the little coastal island that is Old San Juan.

Standing at the entrance to San Juan harbor, the five-tiered fortifications of El Morro tower above the rocky shoreline.

Started in 1539, and modified and added to until the late eighteenth century, the fortress proved the undoing of many an invader in Spanish colonial days. Now, although part of the U. S. Army's Fort Brooke, El Morro is a national historic site.

Old World Flavor
Within walking distance is the heart of Old San Juan with its typical narrow Old World streets; Spanish colonial buildings; the Casa Blanca, one-time home of the family of Juan Ponce de Leon, the explorer who settled Puerto Rico (open one day a week to visitors); San Juan cathedral, dating from the sixteenth century but given its present appearance in the last century, in which Ponce de Leon's tomb is located; San Juan gate, the only remaining gate from the seventeenth century city walls, and La Fortaleza, dimly lit, brocade-walled Victorian setting in an old Spanish building, visitors let the hours race toward dawn amid the calm ripple of a piano, the strumming of a guitar or the soft Spanish crooning of a soloist singer.

And as a final touch, one of the most unique hotels to be found anywhere. Housed in a three-centuries-old former Carmelite convent, remodeled and restored at a cost of some $3 million, El Convento recently was added to the growing number of hotels on the island. The dining room is in the onetime chapel, and the cloister, where colonial era nuns once walked, now contains the swimming pool.

On the subject of hotels, the present more than 3,000 rooms will be increased to some 6,000 by the end of next year. And the government has ordered the hotel to prevent a repetition of an unhappy irritation from last winter when quite a few people arrived with confirmed reservations to find no rooms available.

Pope Confers With Cardinal Presidency

Vatican City — Pope John XXIII conferred today with the 10-cardinal presidency of the Ecumenical Council but Vatican sources said he had no intention of interfering with their handling of the council's voting procedures.

"The Holy Father wants to stay out of it," said one high Vatican source.

The sources said the Pope arranged the special audience today because some of the 10 cardinals, such as Archbishop Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, had arrived only a short time before the council opened last Thursday and he had not had time to talk to them privately since then.

Haifield Requests $1 Million Grant

Salem — Gov. Mark Hatfield today asked President Kennedy for an initial federal grant of $1 million to help restore key state and local governmental facilities knocked out by Friday's storm.

The money would come from a presidential disaster fund, and be allocated through civil defense officials.

This would be separate from federal loans that would be available if the president declares Western Oregon a major disaster area. To qualify for this, the state has to show it is spending $1 million of its own funds to repair damage to government property.

Raymond Willman of Everett, Wash., assistant director of the Northwest regional office of civil defense, met with Hatfield here today.

Seven-Pound Girl Born To Woman Killed in Wreck

Berlin, N.H. — Sister Demers, night supervisor of the St. Louis hospital here, pressed her ear to the abdomen of a dead woman Sunday and thought she detected a heart beat.

The nun dashed to a telephone and summoned a physician.

Dr. Losndre Beaudoin, 62, raced to the hospital and performed a Caesarean section on the body of Mrs. Cecile Berthiaume, who had been dead for more than 30 minutes.

The girl born during the brief operation did have a "heartbeat" but was not breathing.

Beaudoin applied mouth-to-mouth respiration as anxious attendants watched.

The doctor then gave the infant oxygen, and color crept into its tiny face.

Suddenly the baby cried and its breathing became normal.

"It look encouraging that she will survive," Beaudoin said.

The 7-pound, 14-ounce girl was placed in an incubator and was reported in satisfactory condition today.

Mrs. Berthiaume, 28, had been on her way to attend Mass Sunday morning when within one block of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church her car swerved across the road, lumped a sidewalk and crashed into a utility pole.

Staggered From Wreck
The young woman, mother of four, staggered from the wrecked car, walked unsteadily for 10 feet and collapsed on a lawn.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

WHILE the Ringling Brothers Circus was packing Madison Square Garden in New York, the bartender of a rathskeller across the Avenue swears an elephant lumbered in one day and demanded a triple vodka on the rocks. "And don't look so surprised," the elephant added when the bartender gasped. "The drink won't hurt me. I'm not doing the high wire routine today."

Al Bernie, one of the best of the night club entertainers, has played fortnight stands in one lush spot in New York nine times in the past three years. "The boss tells me," explains Bernie, "that he'll keep bringing me back till I get it right."

Bernie estimates that if he had a quarter for every person who driving an expensive sports car who can't afford the next payment, he'd have enough money to afford the next payment on his own expensive sports car.

Bernie also tells of a fat friend who went to his doctor to see if he should diet. The doctor checked him against the weight-height chart and told him, "Your weight is O.K. as is; you'll just have to get a little taller."
