

Severe Epidemic Of Asian Flu Seen in Winter

Chicago (UPI)—There are strong indications that there may be another epidemic of Asian flu this winter, according to the American Medical Association. No one can predict how serious the outbreak may be, the AMA said in a statement, but physicians have been alerted. Because of the vaccine, public health programs have been intensified, and stocks of anti-influenza vaccine have been built up.

AMA spokesmen hoped the disease may not be as widespread this winter as in the epidemic of 1957-58. Can Be Deadly The AMA said in the average healthy person Asian flu means four or five days of weakness and misery. But in older people and those with chronic disease, the flu virus can be deadly. In the five years since Asian flu first appeared in America it has contributed to the death of 90,000 Americans, mostly by weakening the body's defenses against other diseases, the AMA said. Persons with diabetes and with chronic heart, circulatory and kidney diseases are particularly vulnerable. More than half the deaths in previous epidemics were in people with these conditions, according to the AMA. Pneumonia also accompanies influenza frequently. Can Be Prevented There is no cure for Asian flu once it takes hold, the AMA said, but in many instances it can be prevented by the flu vaccine. The AMA statement said "everyone over the age of 45 years needs the vaccine and particularly is it important to those past 65 years."
