"Few of us are aware that women of Oregon were casting their ballots along with their men when other women were picketing the White House and parading in New York demanding that the right to vote not be abridged on account of sex; that Oregon led in the adoption of the initiative and referendum; that Oregon spearheaded the election of United States senators by the people; or that Oregon had the first minimum wage law," he said.

VA Official Asks Lender Indulgence

Portland — R. J. Novotny, manager of the Veterans administration regional office, Portland, appealed to lenders holding "GI" loans to extend all possible indulgence and forbearance to veterans who are victims of the recent windstorm.

Novotny said it is too early to appraise the damage or estimate the number of homes involved.

In some areas the problem is two-fold, Novotny said. The more urgent problem concerns veterans whose homes were destroyed or severely damaged, but there also may be an economic problem facing veterans whose homes were undamaged but who face loss of income because their place of employment was hit by the windstorm.

Novotny said windstorm damage ($50 deductible) is included in the "extended coverage" endorsement attached to practically all fire insurance policies. Veterans with GI loans on their homes who sustained windstorm damage to their properties should immediately contact the insurance agent and the lender before proceeding with repairs.

Veterans who have direct loans made by the VA for the purchase of homes whose properties were damaged should report the extent of damage to the VA and contact the insurance agent before proceeding with repairs.

Ella Apparently To Bypass Coast

Wilmington, N. C. — (UPI) — A "hurricane watch" was in effect along most of the North Carolina coast today but big, plodding hurricane Ella was expected to pass well out to sea.

The Miami Weather Bureau warned, however, that while gale force winds of 35 to 72 miles an hour probably would miss the storied outer banks.

Gale warnings were displayed from Nags Head, N.C., to Georgetown, S.C., and a small craft from Cape May, N. J., to Cape Canaveral, Fla., were cautioned to remain in port.

There were some preparations in advance of the season's fifth tropical disturbance but they mostly involved moving ships to safer berths. There was relatively no boarding up or leaving of homes by storm-wise residents of the oft-buffed coast.
