Ways To Stretch Food Dollars Told In OSU Bulletin

Families who want to keep tabs on the food bill would do well to study a new Oregon State university bulletin that is aimed at helping consumers stretch their food dollar.

The new bulletin suggests the best way to compare food costs is on a cost per serving basis. OSU marketing specialists provide easy-to-use guides to help shoppers compare costs for canned, frozen and fresh fruits and vegetables, plus red meats, poultry and fish.

Price is not always the best indication of real cost of food, say specialists. The consumer must judge for herself food quality, time and work involved in its preparation and her family's likes.

Copies of the bulletin, "Compare Cost Per Serving," are available on request at county extension offices or may be secured by writing the OSU bulletin clerk.

Facts on Fluoridation

What are facts? Reliability depends on the source. What IS the source of facts that indicate addition of fluoride to our water is SAFE, EFFECTIVE, INEXPENSIVE? The most responsible minds of our country: Dwight D. Eisenhower, Dr. Benjamin Spock, George Meany (President, AFL-CIO), Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago, Luther L. Terry, M.D. (U.S. Surgeon General), health service specialists, justices of our courts, qualified scientists, all have examined the pertinent data. There is no controversy among them. They are agreed: fluoridation IS safe, effective, inexpensive.

Then where is the controversy? Some choose, for various reasons, to turn from the mainstream of scientific thought to confused areas. They charge communist plots, threaten poison, profiteering. Ugly words.

Know this without fear. You can be certain. Forty three million people, almost one-fourth of our population, are thriving on fortified water.
