Barakat!

To the Editor: These are comments worthy of consideration:

You can be sure - if a bomb drops.

If for any reason, nuclear war should break out, and the bombs begin flying thick and fast, be assured that the Air Force will have things under control. They have devised a way of telling when and where the bombs drop. A recent Associated Press dispatch from the Air Force Association's convention in Las Vegas disclosed that the Air Force has set up a network of nuclear bomb explosion detectors throughout the U.S. These have been installed in 99 critical target areas. There are three detectors, located 11 miles from prime targets, in every major military and civilian center. Most of them are mounted on utility poles; according to the AP dispatch, "an Air Force spokesman said that's a good place to put them because they are made and serviced by Western Union." The AP dispatch also reported: "The Air Force said the network of blast sensors will give almost instant notice of attack in several military command posts, including the Pentagon. This information will help authorities in making decisions that can spell the difference between survival and annihilation."

In case this doesn't sound comforting, you can always get out of town - before it's too late.

Herman Kahn, as reported in the "Times," thinks the nation should evacuate cities in times of international crisis or limited hostilities. He advocates this not only as a safety precaution, but also as a bargaining weapon in negotiations to keep a limited crisis from erupting into a major nuclear war.

On the other hand, maybe you agree—we've had enough.

The most sensible remark of the month was made by economist Stuart Chase in a letter to the editor of the "Times." He cited the example of the Algerians who when threatened by another civil war, went out into the streets, crying "Barakat!" - "We've had enough." Mr. Chase asked: "When will the people of New York, Moscow, London, Paris come out on the streets and cry 'Barakat!' We've had enough of your arms race which is leading straight to the end of all of us."

Buy Pears

To the Editor and Hi, Everybody: One time back in the yesterdays I was sort of a farmerette. Cheaper to hire a housemaid (third girl) than to hire a hired man - so - I plowed, dragged, hayed, pruned our own orchard and did any and every outside labor. Just leading up to orchardists, weather, pears and "good neighbors", especially.

Some of our neighbors raised pears and are in trouble that means quite a loss.

I once split some ripe pears and dried them in a slow oven. They were as chewy as dried dates and figs.

I just got the happy thought that if every household in Medford and 'round about were to buy pears too ripe to ship, and (I'm sure we local people won't mind if the fruit isn't perfect) we could help the raisers very much and learn about a real goodie that you've been missing.

All the orchardists are fine, honest people and they need all the help we can give them now.

Those who are unable to pick can help by buying as many as you can handle. Think it over, will yuh, huh?

Good gracious, "No!" They aren't relatives of mine, and I do not know an orchardist, but I've been riding past orchards and do not like what I saw.
