

Observance Set For UO School Of Journalism

Eugene - An all-class reunion of the University of Oregon school of journalism is being planned to commemorate its 50th anniversary.

The reunion, to which more than 1,000 journalism school alumni and former students will be invited, will be held sometime during spring term according to John L. Hulteng, dean of the school.

A committee made up of one or more members of each of the 50 classes since 1912, has been appointed to contact classmates and circulate news of the anniversary year plans.

Other observances of the golden anniversary year will include the visit to the campus of a series of distinguished lecturers in the field of journalism and journalism education. Each of the visiting lecturers will spend several days at the school, addressing classes, sitting in on seminars and making a public speech.

First Speaker
The first visitor in the series, Hulteng said, will be Hillier Kriehbaum, chairman of the department of journalism at New York University, and one of the nation's leading authorities in the field of science writing. He is a former member of the UO school of journalism faculty.

Currently Kriehbaum is in South America, conducting seminars in science writing at Latin American universities, but will return to the United States in November. He is expected at the school of journalism during the first week in December.

The UO school of journalism did not come into being as much until 1910, but in 1912 Eric Allen, a Seattle newspaperman, came to Eugene to set up the first formal program in journalism instruction at the university, so far for practical purposes, the current academic year represents the half-century milestone.

When the building which houses the school of journalism was constructed eight years ago, it was named in Eric Allen's honor.

PURCHASE PRAISED

Salem - Gov. Mark Hatfield has praised purchase of the Scott Paper pulp mill at Empire by the Coos Head Timber Co. as "another indication of the confidence in the future of the region."

NAMED TO POST

Washington - George L. Penrose, Tigard, Ore., has been named to a second overseas post with the U. S. Agency for International Development, Sens. Wayne Morse and Maurice Neuberger said today.
