IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A SPECIAL LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN?

So many women are asking this important question.

The answer is—yes. A remarkable new medical discovery called Dioctyl Sodium Sulfosuccinate has now made possible a special new laxative for a woman's sensitive system. We call it Correctol®.

Correctol works two ways. First, its miracle ingredient takes advantage of the natural moisture in your system. Second, its mild laxative acts gently but most effectively. Working together, Correctol's two active ingredients give a woman more natural relief than any ordinary laxative can.

Correctol is recommended any time in a woman's life, even during and after pregnancy.

Try gentle, hospital-tested Correctol... bearing the Good Housekeeping Seal. Ask your druggist for Correctol.

Shrinks Hemorrhoids New Way Without Surgery

STOPS ITCH — RELIEVES PAIN

For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—discovery of a world-famous research institute.

This substance is now available in suppository or ointment form under the name Preparation H®. Ask for it at all drug counters.

A New World for Edie Adams

In the past year, she has been widowed, waged a and fought self-doubts; now she and her daughters see

By JACK RYAN

IN THE STUDIED informality of Southern California, the dinner setting at the home of Edie Adams—or, as she calls herself, Edie Adams Kovacs—was as out of place as starched dickies.

Into a scene of candelabra, glistening china, and Irish linen swept Edie in a dinner gown on which she had concentrated much of her fashion-school training. Her daughters Betty, 15, Kippie, 13, and Mia Susan, 3, followed her in matching high fashion.

Edie viewed her assemblage and made a toast: "This is a big celebration for all of us. We've just made the big payment on your father's tennis club. Now there's only $1,949,000 to go!"

Several weeks later, Edie used the incident to show how things have changed since the death of her husband, comedian Ernie Kovacs, in an automobile accident last January. Things have "leveled off," to use Edie's favorite phrase. There is fun and hope again.

"When Ernie was alive, we used this dining room only on Thanksgiving and Christmas. Ernie loved Southern California because it was so easygoing, just outdoor barbecues and no neckties. But now our house is all girls—my daughters, mother, and I—so things are bound to be more 'dress up.'"

Edie's toast that night also gives insight into one of the problems she has faced. A free-spending, big-thinking extrovert who thoroughly dominated the household, Ernie left an estate initially estimated at $2.1 million—but claims against it run even higher.

Shortly before his death, for example, a reporter told Edie that the Kovacs were $2 million in debt, but before she could even ask her husband about it, Ernie stunned her with: "We just bought the California Racquet Club, 4½ acres, night club, shops—and mortgages."

He never got a chance to tell Edie how they were going to pay for it.

Following the fatal accident, friends like Milton Berle, Frank Sinatra, and Dean Martin seemed so certain Ernie had bungled family finances that they planned a television show to raise money for "helpless" Edie. "No," said Edie, "I can take care of my own children."

THAT EVENING TOAST gives an idea of how well she has begun: instead of unloading all of Ernie's investments, which on closer scrutiny appeared solid, she decided to try to save them by returning full-time to her career as singer-comedienne-actress. But getting back to work was a problem in itself.

"Our office was really Ernie's den," she recalls. "For months I kept it locked and never went in. But business problems kept
