

MEETS WITH POPE
 Vatican City — Pope John XXIII received Japanese Premier Hayato Ikeda in a 25-minute private audience Tuesday. The pontiff also received Ikeda's wife and daughter and 19 Japanese government officials who are members of the Ikeda party.

WALKS TO SAFETY
 Eugene — Ethan Emery, 76, of Big Fall Creek, walked out of the woods Tuesday after being missing overnight. Emery, an experienced woodsman, was the object of a search after he failed to return from a hunting trip Monday.

Small Worlds Around Us

Wings, Flippers and Fins Serve Animals as Hands
 All the ingredients for an insult are supposed to be contained in the command, "Keep your cotton-picking hands off." Just by substituting the word "paws" for hands is supposed to be pretty degrading. Of course, it would be a little awkward to mean the same thing but to say, "Keep your flippers or wings off," in the animal world would mean about the same thing, for wings, flippers, fins or hands are similar.

Place an alligator in an upright position, forget or overlook the tail, and you will be surprised to notice how human-like the body is, the fore-paws being equivalent to our arms. The same similarity exists between man and frog. Even a turtle, viewed from the front and upright, can represent pretty accurately a very broad fat man.

Arm-Like Wings
 The same condition is evident with nearly all animals, with the exception of snakes and insects. Even with birds, the wings are arm-like. The flippers of the whale, porpoise, seal and sea lion are all modified arms, unfortunately, of course, without the fingers or the hands that make the human arms so adaptable. With the porpoise's native intelligence it is rather startling to think what the animal could have accomplished had it been equipped with opposable thumbs.

The fingernails of the human hand are little different, either in purpose or actual use, than the claws of the cat, dog or any other animal. Even the claws of the bird are similar. The dog with only four fingers on the paw has another one, thumblike but not opposable, farther up on the leg. It's really a rudimentary remainder of a thumb, but it has lost its usefulness.

The wings of a bird are really arms, feather-covered and of course, very useful as far as the bird is concerned. And strangely enough, each wing has a "not so reasonable" facsimile of a thumb. Next time you "pick" a chicken notice the "little thumb" at the end of each wing; never fear it will be there and it's a "thumb," the nearest thing to a thumb the chicken can ever possess. Imagine, a thumb but no fingers.

Baroness von Trapp Reviews History of Family at Meeting

"Find out the will of God, then do it."
 This advice was given last night by Baroness Maria von Trapp when she spoke for members of the Rogue River Valley Knife and Fork club at the Rogue Valley Country Club.

This advice, she explained, has been the guide for the world-famous Trapp Family Singers.

The speaker, now inkeeper at the Trapp Family lodge at Stowe, Vt., reviewed the history of her family. Young Maria, a novice in Austria, was loaned by the convent to the household of widower Baron Georg von Trapp as governess for his seven motherless children.

Married the Father
 "I fell in love with the children and married the father," the baroness explained.

Their singing was only a hobby, she continued, until Father Franz Wagner, chaplain at the family's estate chapel, encouraged them to sing a cappella.

The speaker told how the family fled Austria in 1938, "hiking" out of the country leaving behind their ancestral wealth and personal belongings. From Italy, where the family turned a hobby of singing into a livelihood, they had to move to France, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, before they had saved enough money to sail for the United States.

Reviews Trips
 Baroness von Trapp reviewed their many coast-to-coast and foreign tours and how in 1942, when visiting Vermont which reminded them of their native Austria, they purchased a 700-acre farm.

The Alpine-styled home they built had 144 window boxes.

The Trapp family's latest project is fighting communism in the South Pacific islands. The Baroness told of their visits to the various islands talking with the missionaries to find out what could be done. It was during this trip that Father Wagner stayed in Fiji Island to train the natives, who will in turn visit the other islands to spread Christianity.

People Too Busy
 The Baroness said that many people are too busy with themselves to think of others. She concluded with the last line of the final song of the Broadway play, "The Sound of Music," which is about the Trapp family, "Love isn't love until you give it away."

 After her talk, the Baroness told of her lodge in Vermont at the request of Otto Frohnmayer, club president.

Mrs. Gilbert Parker, a guest of the John S. Days from Australia, presented the speaker with a kangaroo pin, thanking her for "all the nice things you said about Australia."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Jack Crawford.

Medford Man Arrested On Contributing Count
 Sam Houston Wingfield, 56, of 2311 Sterns Way, Medford, was lodged in the county jail yesterday afternoon on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, Jackson county sheriff's deputies have reported.

Wingfield was arrested Tuesday afternoon on charges of molesting three girls, 8, 9 and 10 years old, in the Medford area.
