Report of Soviet Planes Over U.S. Firmly Denied

Washington - (UPI) - The administration has stated emphatically that Soviet reconnaissance planes have never flown over the United States.

Both the White House and the Air Force denied a published report that Russian aircraft overflew the southeastern United States during the Cuban crisis.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said flatly that no such flights have ever taken place.

The report appeared last Saturday in the Scripps-Howard papers. It was attributed to "independent sources."

On Tuesday night in Pittsburgh Salinger said, "this type of journalism is destructive."

Denials Continued - The press secretary and the Air Force, in the person of its chief of staff, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, continued the denials Wednesday.

Nevertheless, Scripps-Howard continued to insist - just as firmly - that the reports were true.

Editor - in - chief Walker Stone said in a statement: "What we published is true. It's just too bad if nobody has bothered to tell Mr. Salinger."

Salinger had no comment on Stone's statement.

Israeli Court Rules Birth Not Citizen Grounds

Jerusalem, Israel - (UPI) - The Supreme Court ruled today in a historic decision that just because a person is born a Jew he is not entitled to Israeli citizenship simply because of that fact.

The 4-1 decision was handed down by the high court in the case of Roman Catholic Carmelite Friar Father Daniel, 40. The priest was born Oswald Bufilesen of Orthodox Jewish parents in Poland.

During World War II, he was given refuge by Catholic nuns in a convent and later was converted to Catholicism.

Request Opposed - He came to Israel and since 1959 has been trying to obtain Israeli citizenship on grounds he was born a Jew, even though he now is a Catholic. The government opposed granting him citizenship on this ground, although he is entitled to naturalized Jewish citizenship in line with the so-called 1950 "law of return." This law says any Jew can emigrate to Israel if he is not a criminal and claim citizenship.

The decision, in effect, means that a Jew cannot convert to Christianity and then enter this country and automatically claim citizenship. But he can become a naturalized citizen.

Repercussions Seen - It is certain to cause wide repercussions among Jews throughout the world, and present grave problems to Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's government which is made up of representatives of the extremes of Jewish thought.

There has been disagreement between Zionists who want to develop Israel as a natural homeland for all Jews and the anti-Zionists who insist that Israel is merely a political state.

Hanson's Presentation of 'Carol' Enchants Reviewer

Surely there were others who went to see Philip Hanson's performance of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol" with the same mixed emotions that we did.

It was not that we doubted Hanson's ability to bring the thing off with his one-man show format. He made an abject believer of us a couple of years ago with his adaptation and performance of "Moby Dick," about as Herculean a task as anyone ever attempted.

No, it was just that, hang it all, "Christmas Carol" is a chestnut, as familiar and somehow as false as a set of cotton Santa Claus whiskers. For years on end, Lionel Barrymore read the piece on radio every Christmas season, and with the advent of television a host of other performers, among them Basil Rathbone, have taken a crack at it. And all for the benefit of the kiddies.

Commercial Venture - Then, too, Christmas has become such a commercial venture in the last decade or so (no sooner are Thanksgiving sales over than the Christmas sale signs go up) that we have been tempted to echo old Scrooge and grumble "Bah! Humbug!" every time we think about it.

But we must admit, ungrudgingly, that we were enchanted with Hanson's presentation last night. And judging from the laughter and applause of the sizable audience which braved the pea-soup fog to attend the performance in Churchill auditorium at Southern Oregon college last night, we weren't alone in our enjoyment.

Hanson scored two major triumphs last night with his performance. He - with the sensitivity of his adaptation, and the versatility and charm of his stage talent - transformed the "Christmas Carol," the old chestnut, into something as warm and savory as a fresh plum pudding.

Made Scrooge Human - And secondly, he made Scrooge a human being, a real, flesh-and-blood man, whom the audience grew slowly to love as Hanson helped them to understand him.

With unusual skill, Hanson delineated Scrooge as a man who, like many of us, made the wrong turn somewhere early in life, and now, in his old age, was totally lost - spiritually - because of it.

He had dedicated himself so completely to the pursuit of cold cash that human warmth had gone out of him. The balance sheets in his ledgers were the sum and substance of his life.

But because he was a man, and hence worthy saving, his dead partner, Jacob Marley, together with the three Christmas spirits, made him see, with eyes that did not comprehend at first, that love, not dollars, is the highest and most worthy attainment in life.

Earlier Life Visited - After Scrooge, led by the Ghost of Christmas Past, has visited the scenes of his earlier life, where he saw himself again fondly, unhappily and neglected, Hanson had the old miser crying, begging, pleading to be shown no more.

Bit by bit, with consummate theatrical artistry, Hanson revealed warmth and humanity returning to the long-chilled heart of Scrooge, so that at the end when the old man fairly skipped around the stage with the joy and exaltation of a reborn human being, the audience sat wreathed in smiles of pleasure and well-being.

Finally, for all the pathos and delightful humor which Hanson was able to evoke, the presentation had a serious philosophical point to make.

Led by the Ghost of the Future, Scrooge found himself in a cemetery, where he quaked piteously at the sight of the black, yawning hole of his own grave with its cold, damp headstone nearby. No one had mourned his death. Scrooge turned to the ghost and asked whether this was what "will happen, or what will happen?" The answer he discovers is that each man's life is his to make as he will, that "the time before him is his own."

All Images by One - It came as something of a start at the end of the performance to realize that one man had evoked all those images, had by a simple voice variation or change in posture literally filled the stage with such a rich variety of people. We know he is an actor, but there are qualities of Merlin and Hans Christian

Anderson in Hanson too. His performance of "Christmas Carol" may not inspire you to run out and finish your Christmas shopping, but it may well move you to re-examine your own heart. Neither Dickens nor Hanson would ask for more. G.H.B.
