Requirements Noted for Timber Valuation Law

Owners of "old growth" timber and established "tracts" should take action by Jan. 1 to meet two important requirements under the new private timber valuation law, Thad Hatten, county assessor reminded timber owners this week.

These valuation procedures apply for all private western Oregon timber land except that on classified reforestation land and that on land classified under the small tract optional tax law.

These valuation procedures established three timber classes known as reproduction, young growth, old growth. The law gives the method of arriving at the true cash value for assessment purposes for each of these classes.

For old growth the true cash value is 30 percent of its immediate harvest value except for owners who could show their timber being harvested in a longer than 30-year period. In that case, the true cash value would be 25 percent of the immediate harvest value.

The 25 percent valuation factor for a tract was established only upon application of the owner and if his cutting rate was slow enough.

Owners of tracts established through report to the county assessor and tax commission before Jan. 1 must either file a description by Jan. 1, 1963 of any additions or deletions from the tract or file a statement that the tract is unchanged.

Owners of old growth timber (over 90 years) who have not established a tract and feel their timber is being cut at a longer than 30-year rate as shown by the past three years' harvest, may establish a tract and receive the 25 percent valuation factor by applying to the county assessor and tax commission.

Tract owners must meet these requirements or the timber will be assessed at a true cash value of 30 percent of its immediate harvest values.
