Attorneys Seek Justification for Judge's Belief

Boise, Idaho — (UPI) — Defense attorneys sought legal justification today for a federal judge's belief the Air Force has waived the right to try A1-C Gerald M. Anderson on murder charges.

U.S. District Judge Chase A. Clark late Wednesday took under advisement habeas corpus proceedings designed to free Anderson from threat of a military court martial.

Anderson, 24, San Diego, is accused by the Air Force of premeditated murder in the knife slayings at nearby Mountain Home last April of Mrs. Nancy Joy Johnson, 22, and her son, Danny, 2.

Questioned by agents of the Air Force Office of Special Investigation from April 11-17, Anderson finally "confessed" killing Mrs. Johnson — a confession he later repudiated on grounds he was coerced into making it.

The Air Force turned him over to Idaho civil authorities April 18 for prosecution but last month another man, Theodore Thomas Dickie, 21, confessed the slayings and the state court freed Anderson.

It was then, Nov. 27, that the Air Force charged Anderson with murdering both mother and child.

Judge Clark said that "it is my opinion that in doing so (turning Anderson over to civil authorities) they (the Air Force) waived their jurisdiction." However, he gave defense counsel 10 days to submit written briefs to back up his opinion and the Air Force another 10 days in which to answer.

"I will say frankly in the history of law books I have been unable to find a case in point," Judge Clark said.

Khrushchev May Be Willing To Ponder Reducing War Risk

Washington — (UPI) — President Kennedy's advisors believe the Cuban experience may have left Soviet Premier Khrushchev more willing to consider means of reducing the risk of war by surprise or accident.

They also think the Russian, shown he cannot deploy nuclear weapons in the Western Hemisphere, may also be ready to discuss a formal agreement prohibiting the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Soviet statements at the 17-nation disarmament conference, in Geneva, Switzerland, will be studied closely for hints supporting or undermining these hopes.

The United States intends no new proposals in the field of general disarmament as long as the Cuban situation remains unsettled.

The conference, in recess for two and a half months while the United Nations general assembly met in New York, is to meet until it begins a Christmas recess about Dec. 21. It is expected to return to work again about Jan. 8.

President Kennedy set the stage for its renewed work in his Oct. 28 statement and letter to Khrushchev acknowledging the Russian's decision to withdraw Soviet missiles from Cuba.

His letter declared the two countries should "give top priority to questions relating to the proliferation of nuclear weapons, on earth and in outer space, and to the great effort for a nuclear test ban."

In the statement, Kennedy said he hoped there could now be a discussion of ways for dealing with the military confrontation between the NATO and Warsaw Pact countries.

Willing To Trade Views
Khrushchev replied he was willing to exchange views on a possible relaxation of tension between the NATO and Warsaw treaty countries, and also on the prohibition of atomic and thermonuclear weapons, on general disarmament and on other problems relating to the relaxation of international tension.

The President's advisors believe that now Khrushchev has learned he cannot establish missile bases in this hemisphere, the Russian may be willing to consider a formal agreement ending the spread of nuclear weapons to nations which do not now possess them.

The President has two agreements in mind — one ending proliferation on earth, and another insuring that nuclear warheads would not be placed in orbit around the earth.

Above all, the President's advisors believe the Cuban experience may have shown Khrushchev the wisdom of moving slowly and in the open.

This has long been the point of American proposals to reduce the risk of war by accident, surprise or miscalculation. This would result in all nations being aware of massive or significant military moves by all others, and their purpose, and therefore unlikely to react rashly.

Khrushchev has seen how the county court would welcome working with the county planning commission in developing needed long range planning for county-owned properties and buildings; the county court wrote the planning commission recently.

The county court agrees the policy for future building construction and land development by the county should be studied and recommended by the Jackson county planning commission. This approach should be normal procedure," the letter stated.

The court urged full cooperative consideration for joint and city planning commission studies.

A review of existing county lands and buildings as to present use and need for expansion should be made, the letter stated.

"A great portion of the fairgrounds property while being county property is situated inside the city of Medford and would be subject to the zone regulations of the city and buildings would be subject to the Medford city planning commission under variances of zone changes," the letter stated further.

close he brought the world to war by his secret military buildup in Cuba.

Better Communication
One measure to reduce the risk of war would be the improvement of communication between heads of government.

Using the old-fashioned means of communication that were available, their aides found it required at least six hours for a private message from Kennedy or Khrushchev to reach the other during the Cuban crisis. When they needed to communicate more rapidly they had to abandon privacy.

But the congress last month approved and the President signed a law permitting the United States to permit foreign embassies in Washington to operate radio transmitters in return for the same privilege for U.S. embassies in other countries.

If such an agreement were worked out with Russia, it would mean both embassies could use automatic encrypting devices — better known as scramblers — and could transmit private messages between government in minutes.

It is probably as close to realization as the idea of a "hot" telephone line linking the White House and the Kremlin will ever come. But in an age of nuclear missiles, it is believed, this kind of arrangement could prevent war.

Lively Interest
The President continues to have a lively interest in the possibility of an agreement to end nuclear testing.

But such an agreement must be carefully policed, as disarmament itself, and this is where the Russians balk.

During the Geneva recess, the Russians indicated they might consider a grid of sealed "black boxes" which would carry instruments for detecting nuclear explosions, and which could be read from time to time by neutral experts in neutral territories. From the Russian point of view, the plan has the merit that it appears to accept the international verification even the neutrals now say is necessary, yet does not require the presence of foreign inspectors inside Russia.

The Americans say the "black boxes" could be easily tampered with. But they are willing to participate in a scientific study of the possibilities.

The President continues to reject Soviet proposals for another unpoliced moratorium on testing. The Russians violated the last such moratorium, without warning.

Truck Theory in Air Crash Rejected

Washington — (UPI) — The Federal Aviation agency Thursday discounted conjecture that a maintenance truck might have contributed to the crash of an Eastern Air Lines plane in New York City last Friday night.

The theory, raised by a source close to the investigation of the accident which killed 25 persons, involved a possibility that a ground vehicle driving through fog might have wandered across the runway in front of the airliner just as it was about to land.

But an FAA spokesman said a thorough check of all ground vehicle movements at the time of the crash showed there was none near the runway where the plane was trying to land.
