Christmas Spending Expected To Be Up About $100 Million

New York—UPI—The stock market jangle jangled nerves with its ups and downs during the last quarter.

In Santa land, they're wondering if the roller coaster market heralds a two-bit Christmas season. Will spenders, out on a merry spree, pinch pennies?

The jolly gent's statisticians needn't worry, according to a survey of holiday spending plans on the homefront and in the executive suite.

Spending To Be Up
Total anticipated yuletide spending: $8.15 billion—up $100 million over last year's holiday spending.

Nine out of ten families participating in the survey conducted by a Chicago firm answered a resounding "no" when asked if the gyrations of the stock market would have an effect on how much the family intends to spend for Christmas gifts.

The anticipation of a lusty Christmas business, is reinforced by results of a survey among 250 executives in five major cities—Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Atlanta.

No trend toward tightened purse strings was detected. Corporate giving, on the average, will cost $11.27 per gift with the spread running from $1 to $30.

Gifts for and from those in the executive suite range from umbrellas and charity contributions to books and money—with liquor getting the highest rating. Thirty-nine per cent of those surveyed said liquor headed the business gift list.

Intentions Told
In this order, the executives also intend to give—food (fruit, cheese, candy), cigars, gift certificates, leather goods, books, umbrellas, traveling equipment, jewelry, money and subscriptions to publications.

One segment of the business community is skating on thin ice. Thirteen per cent of the executives said they will spend more on business gifts than they will for their mate's gift.

When the little woman finds out, there might be a dunking.

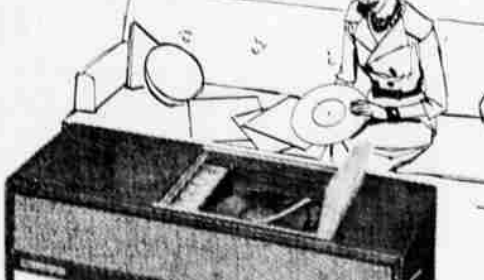

But that's the only dampening influence detected in the Christmas shopping situation for 1962.

HIGH COURT MEETS
Washington—UPI—The Supreme court was to meet today to hand down decisions and orders before starting the second week of arguments in the December session.
