Pomanders Make Inexpensive and Attractive Gifts

For small remembrance gifts or stocking stuffers, pomander balls, oldtime favorites, are easily and inexpensively made.

Select large firm oranges or apples for making pomanders. Stick whole cloves into the peel until the fruit is completely covered with cloves. They can be inserted more easily if small holes have been made with the tines of a fork or a very sharp instrument such as a pencil point or ice pick.

Roll in a mixture of equal parts of orrisroot and ground cinnamon. Use about one and one-half tablespoons of combined spices for each. Pat in as much of the powdered mixture as will adhere and wrap the pomander in tissue or cellophane paper. (Orrisroot may be obtained at a drug store.)

As the pomander dries and shrinks, it develops its spicy fragrance. Remove from paper, shake off any loose powder and the pomander is ready for use in linen or clothes closets.

To hang in a closet, tie with a piece of ribbon ending in a loop.

Pomanders keep their fragrance for many years and make an attractive gift to be long remembered.

The hat worn by the late Mrs. John Lindley many years ago might win a prize at the annual Junior Service league ball set for Saturday, December 15, at Rogue Valley Country club, if it could be worn again. "Christmas—Past and Present" is the theme of the annual gala party and following a custom of several years, women attending will either wear fanciful headresses or elaborate hair styles. Awards are given for the most outstanding. This picture of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lindley, taken by a photographer in New Whatcom, Wash., is the property of Mrs. Leigh E. Gustison. Mrs. Lindley was Anna Phipps, member of the well-known pioneer Phipps family of Medford.

For some time Potpourri has been carrying on an experiment. We've been scrupulously holding to the speed limit, particularly on Riverside avenue. It was on this busy highway that we were flagged down by a polite city policeman more than a year ago, who asserted that we were exceeding the speed limit. Ever since, we've been very, very careful.

It's most interesting to note what happens when one drives out Riverside at a heavy traffic period, with the speedometer exactly at the figure which is stated on the signs as being the speed limit. We did that one noon hour recently. We turned on to Riverside from Eighth and for a time the stream of traffic moved along with no one passing. By the time we approached Sixth, the other vehicles were beginning to pass us. First a log truck went booming past us, then a two-unit gasoline carrier, then a truck belonging to a utility company, and then a young man on a motorcycle, and then a sedan filled with children and with a young woman at the wheel, and so on.

We continued on past the Big Y and headed for Central Point and then the stream of vehicles going by us increased markedly. We still were watching the speed limit signs and holding the speedometer needle at that figure as closely as possible.

That evening we had a meeting on the East side, and so we drove down Stewart avenue and headed toward the railroad track. A long train was on the crossing. The engineer backed until only the engine barred the crossing - the train came to a stop and sat there for a few moments with the cars beginning to pile up. At length the train began to move, in the opposite direction of course, and the line of cars became longer and longer.

But even trains come to an end, the traffic began to move, and we followed the cars ahead onto Riverside and headed toward town.

Again we watched carefully for the speed limit signs and kept the speedometer at the exact figure. Again the other vehicles passed us, quite a large number. Four went skimming by, just before we pulled up at the stop light at Eighth street, and hurried on in order to "make the green light." The last one didn't quite make it, but he went on through on the red.

The fifth car stopped and we looked at it with great interest. It was a Medford police car - O.S.
