

Ashland Festival Featured in Chico College Tourney

Ashland-The Oregon Shakespearean Festival at Ashland was featured prominently in a tournament of California high schools held Saturday at Chico State college. Keynote speaker for the event was Richard Graham, widely known Ashland actor. Graham told the more than 500 students participating of the Elizabethan method of staging the four plays at Ashland. Graham appeared for 11 years in the Oregon Festival, and recently returned from four years in New York. For two seasons he appeared in New York's Central Park Shakespeare Festival and in one season at the Stratford, Conn., Festival. Known as the Northern California Shakespearean Festival, the annual Chico event consists of a competition among high schools in scenes drawn from the plays to be presented at Ashland the following summer. Students vie during the morning hours, students vie with soliloquies for both men and women from "Love's Labour's Lost," "Henry V." and "Romeo and Juliet." Full scenes from "Merry Wives of Windsor" also were entered using both men and women from each participating school. All four plays are on the upcoming Ashland schedule. Graham's talk was given in the afternoon following the "command perform a n c e s" during which the winning schools presented their scenes. His talk was illustrated with slides showing the Oregon Shakespearean Festival theater and its setting in Lithia park. He touched on the increasing number of student groups attending the Ashland plays from all parts of the Western United States. The Northern California Shakespeare Festival for high schools is sponsored by the Chico State chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, a national collegiate honorary dramatic society. Miss Ann Becker of the Chico State drama department faculty is coordinator of the event. She has been instrumental in basing the competition of the plays to be presented at Ashland.

School News

CP Elementary School

This year, the Central Point elementary school will have a "White Christmas." Students will take a can of food, wrapped in white tissue paper to place under the school tree. The cans of food will be sent to the needy families in North and South America and overseas.

Mrs. Viola Laird's group won the PTA membership contest. Mrs. Holbrook, assistant librarian, was in the classroom recently, and served our class lemonade and cupcakes.

Mrs. Laird's room has been studying Mexico and Mexican foods. Many children have brought recipes and recipe booklets. Warren Cooper and Dennis O'Connor brought Mexican wedding cakes to school. Chris Johns brought tortillas he made.

Students of Mr. Elgan Amidon's fifth grade class visited the U. S. weather bureau station as an aid in classroom study of weather and airplanes.

Mr. House and Mr. Lampkin explained weather predictions, and showed instruments used to record atmospheric conditions. They also explained the weather bureau networks for putting individual reports into the national weather pattern. Later, students were shown and given samples of weather maps for the day.

In regard to their study of airplanes, they watched the arrival and departure of an airliner. While watching the handling of baggage and refueling, they noted procedures that are typical with an airline stop. Mr. Kilbourn explained United's ticket validation procedures.

The staff of the Central Point elementary school paper, "The Pointer Pup News," is assembling and editing copy for the next issue, which will be published Dec. 21.

Students are working on compositions and posters for the Central Point Garden club contest. The theme for this year is "What to do in the woods."

Jackson School

The fifth and sixth grade chorus has been practicing on songs for the Christmas program.

There will be a special group of students singing two numbers.

The chorus meets every Monday and Wednesday at activity period. It meets at all available free times to practice for the special program.

The special daily remedial reading classes will have a rest period until Jan. 7. The number of this class varies with the degree of progress made and study skills acquired.

The Red Cross food drive project is now going on at Jackson. We already have several boxes of canned or packaged food. Larry Funk and Richard Keene are the students who collect the cans and packages brought by students to their home rooms. They will go with the teacher advisor to the Red Cross building and deliver the food to the Red Cross. The Red Cross and other agencies will give it to needy families.

An informal question and answer period with Principal Bruce Metzger preceded the class visitation and observance at the Third Grade Curriculum Party for Parents recently.
