

Interior Department Plans Steps to Solve Problems of People on Unpatented Mining Claims

Washington - The department of the interior will begin early in 1963 to process applications to solve the long-standing problems of people residing on unpatented mining claims, according to Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall.

He declared the department will continue its program of preventing unauthorized occupancy of public lands under the guise of mining claims. Copies of a new information bulletin will be in the hands of land office managers within several weeks and regulations which will govern settlement of claims will be published shortly in the federal register, Udall said.

A large number of persons primarily in northern California who have their homes on unpatented mining claims on the national land reserve and in national forests will be affected, the secretary explained.

Before a person can obtain land or an interest in it, under the law, the mining claim must be declared invalid or the person must voluntarily relinquish his claim to the United States, Udall explained. All applications must be filed by Oct. 23, 1967. This benefits persons owning real-estate on unpatented mining claims Oct. 23, 1962, if such residences have been on the land since July 23, 1955, and to heirs and successors.
