Dellenback Named Liaison Officer To Governor's Office

Salem—UPI—A call for a "bi-partisan approach" to House leadership based on "experience and ability" was voiced today by House Minority Leader F. F. Montgomery (R-Eugene). Montgomery said Republican House members caucused here Monday night to reiterate their plea for "statesmanship" on the part of House Speaker-designate Clarence Burton (D-Coquille) in appointment of committees in the House. Montgomery also announced that Republicans selected Rep. Victor Aiyeh (R-Portland) and Robert Smith (R-Burns) as minority floor leaders. Dellenback named John R. Dellenback (R-Medford) was named liaison officer to the governor's office; Ken Maher (R-Portland) liaison to the secretary of state; and Joe Rogers (R-Independence) liaison to the Republican State Central Committee. Democrats hold a slim 31-

29 lead in the House. Montgomery said "the change of 1,000 votes could have given the Republicans leadership." "We want what is best for the people of Oregon. It is our belief they want a bi-partisan approach." Montgomery said "we have called upon the Democrats in the House for a show of statesmanship and concern for the real welfare of Oregon" in committee appointments. "To date we have waited in vain for such statesmanship to become evident. We have offered our party's full support in helping to measure up to the level of leadership and performance the people of Oregon rightfully expect of their legislature." "To date that offer has been rejected," Montgomery charged. Montgomery said both parties have an obligation to the people of Oregon. He explained the 1963 session will be a crucial one with key decisions to be made, and said neither party has a monopoly on experience. He charged "The House should not be organized on a partisan political basis, but rather at this crucial time the most able people in both parties should be called upon to share the load of leadership." When Burton was chosen speaker-designate at a Democratic caucus last month, he said he was appointing a "committee on committees" to set up committee assignments.

'Social Season' Tip Given by Chief

Medford area residents who are planning holiday parties received a "social season" tip from Chief of Police Charles P. Champlin.
The chief reminded hosts of the need for checking their guests' cocktail consumption, with an eye toward keeping them from behind the wheel of a car until the effects of drinks are dissipated.
Champlin admitted that doing so might demand tact and diplomacy, but he added that "the consequences of permitting someone to leave your home in an unsafe driving condition can be serious injury or death for them or someone else."
"A major cause of holiday accidents," he said, spills out of glasses and bottles, and party-givers should give sober thought to the accident danger mixed with the drinks they serve.
"The best antidote to liquor, he said, is time. Most authorities recommend that for each ounce of liquor consumed, approximately one hour should elapse before attempting to drive."
WHAT NO STAMPS?
New York—UPI—Approximately 57 per cent of retailers canvassed recently believe trading stamps, currently being used by many companies to induce business, are on their way out, says The Gallegher Report in a letter to advertisers and marketers.

Cliburn Plans to Play Next 52 Years

By ROBERTA C. SCH' ARTZ
United Press International
Washington—Famed pianist Van Cliburn plans to alter his career drastically and turn to another form of musical expression. But the 29-year-old virtuoso says he'll remain a pianist for at least the next 52 years.
"I would like to be a conductor and tour when I'm 80," Cliburn said recently.
He made his directing debut last year when he both conducted and played Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto. His interest in conducting has grown since then.
After a performance, the personable young pianist enjoys autographing albums for fans, giving tips to young music students and meeting some of their teachers. He often asks the youngsters questions about their studies and what music they enjoy playing most.
Winner of the first Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow in 1958, Cliburn candidly admits he prefers opera to the piano and calls it his "favorite form of music."
"When I was a small child I always wanted to be a Metropolitan opera star," he recalls. "The two roles I consider most fabulous are Don Giovanni and Boris Godunov."
In those days Cliburn found opera singers "more glamorous than any movie star." But he said his own experience is limited to singing the bass part in his home town church choir.
He is equally candid about his method of selecting his repertoire. "I don't play anything I don't like," Cliburn says. "If I like something I will try to play it and I know I will go further that way."
Grand Manner
The Texas born pianist, who stands six-foot-four, says he feels most at home in large concert halls constructed in the "grand manner."
"The United States is blessed with a lot of beautiful halls . . . good halls. They were made in years when you could use a lot of wood." This, he said, makes them acoustically sound. His favorites are New York's Carnegie hall and Constitution hall in Washington, D.C.

Mother Was a Pianist
"My mother was a concert pianist and I enjoyed listening to her practice," he recalls. "I began playing at three but by the time I was 12 years old I began to realize how much there is to life. I wanted to be with my playmates down the street, but I had to discipline myself."
Cliburn's early experiments in music weren't always successful. "I played the clarinet for four or five years in a marching band when I was 13, but I wasn't interested in it at all. I was not a good clarinet player," he adds wryly.
Cliburn is enthusiastic about Romantic literature and enjoys quoting lines from Lord Byron's "Childe Harold." He also reads mystery writers like Agatha Christie because he says they help him to relax.
Lives in New York
Today Cliburn says his rigorous schedule allows him only a few close friends and he maintains contact with them mostly by telephone.
He lives in a small apartment in New York where he practices from midnight on through most of the day. Sometimes, though, he stops playing in the early morning hours in deference to his neighbors.
Recently Cliburn was elected one of the five most eligible bachelors in America by the Hollywood Bachelor Girls Club. The group predicted four out of five men would be married by next June.
"I'm overwhelmed," says Cliburn. "I didn't know anybody knew I was around. When I marry I want a very stable household and I want my children to know their father," he adds firmly. But Cliburn is under contract until 1965 and he says marriage will have to wait.
"But," he adds with a grin, "I'd love to meet the chairman of that group."
