Back Stairs: Kennedy, Macmillan Do Best Conferring Under Balmy Skies

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (UPI)—Backstairs at the White House, President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Macmillan seem to do their best conferring at balmy winter resorts. They first met in Key West, Fla., during the late winter of 1961 shortly after Kennedy took office.

Their last meeting was just a year ago in Bermuda. And today, while Washington is a London shiver, the two leaders are talking in the fashionable warmth of the Bahamas.

For their next winter meeting, Kennedy might invite Macmillan to a resort on the U. S. mainland, Palm Beach, Fla., or perhaps, Palm Springs, Calif.

Palm Beach, where the president will fly late today for the Christmas holidays, has seen crowned heads and potentates for many years. A prime minister would not sup-

OREGON DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES

Editor's note: Following is the last of 12 articles dealing with Oregon motor vehicle laws. Questions regarding state motor vehicle laws may be submitted to the Department of Motor Vehicles, Traffic Safety Division, Salem.

POSTING BAIL
Mr. S. was stopped by a police officer in a town about 70 miles from his home. The charge was violation of the basic rule — 40 miles an hour in a 25 mile-per-hour zone.

He was required to go with the police officer to the city traffic violations bureau, since police officers cannot accept cash bail, where he posted the bail set in the uniform schedule. In this case, the amount was $25. (Bail on speed violations is graduated upward, depending on how much in excess of the designated or posted speed the driver was going.)

Mr. S. posted the bail, and then went home to decide whether or not he should contest the charge. Later, he pleaded guilty and forfeited the bail.

His encounter with the law is not unusual, but it is worth recounting for several reasons, the most important of which is that in all likelihood he could have posted bail by mail if his citation had been issued by a state police officer or county sheriff, rather than by a city police officer. State police and sheriffs issue the citation, releasing a driver on his own recognizance, because it would take too much time from highway patrol to go with the violator to the nearest magistrate, who may be miles away, to post bail.

May Fail To Appear
Most cities, however, require out-of-town residents to post the bail at the time of the citation. They do so because there is always the possibility that the driver will fail to appear at the time set for hearing, or to correspond with the court as instructed on the uniform ticket.

If he should fail to appear or contact the court, the offense could go unpunished because in Oregon a municipal court warrant, unlike one issued by other traffic courts, cannot be served in any other city.

At the time of the citation, Oregon law provides that a

Campaign Worker Joins Peace Corps

By GEORGE WEEKS
United Press International

MONROVIA, Liberia, (UPI)—Two years ago Thomas H. E. Quimby was a campaign representative for President Kennedy in the Midwest.

Today he is a Peace Corps representative for Kennedy in Africa.

Quimby, former Michigan Democratic National Committeeman, directs a 91-member project in Liberia that has given Africa's oldest republic a 180 per cent increase in the number of college graduates teaching in secondary schools.

To Liberia Education Minister John P. Mitchell, there is only one thing wrong with the project — it isn't large enough.

"I wish I could have gotten 200 Peace Corps volunteers," he told a reporter.

Mitchell said what the volunteers lack in experience in Africa and the classroom they make up in enthusiasm.

They are youngsters who want to do something," he said. "They aren't bureaucrats interested in a career."

Liberian Planning Director J. Milton Weeks said the ultimate effect on Liberia's total economic situation will be "revolutionary."

"They will decrease our dropout rate and improve our basic curricula. By their professional attitude, they will cut down teacher absenteeism, late classes and improper preparation."

In one remote village, accessible only by a trail that washes out on occasion in the rainy season, two volunteers teach in a school whose principal has had only one year of college. One of the students in the fifth grade is 22 years old.

Lack of Red Tape
Quimby said volunteers and staff alike are pleased with the lack of red tape in the Peace Corps.

Here, the emphasis is on the initiative of the individual volunteer," said Quimby, who was director of workmen's compensation in Michigan under Governor G. Mennen Williams, now assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

Quimby isn't exactly a volunteer in the same sense as one of his volunteers, who earn $75-a-month plus living expenses. His annual salary is $16,320.

But Quimby, a tall, crew-cut, prematurely grey, 40-year-old graduate, likes to think the staff and volunteers are alike in that they all have to rely on "ourselves and our own power" in Africa, as to a greater extent than they would in the United States.

Remote Areas
With the help of bush pilots, Quimby's staff plied and is supplying volunteers in some of the most remote areas of Liberia, thus helping President William V. S. Tubman's program of taking education to the hinterland.

Volunteers had to be flown into one coastal village because the ocean was too rough for surf boats. Two

Peace Corps doctors had to be flown out of another village when a makeshift bridge washed out.

Supplying the volunteers once they get in place is one of Quimby's daily headaches.

One day in September two volunteers in the mud-lane village of Bopulu sent word to Quimby's headquarters in Monrovia that they were bothered by rats in the night. Two other volunteers awaiting assignment in Monrovia were dispatched to Bopulu in a four-wheel-drive vehicle that was up to its running boards much of the time as it traversed the Bopulu Trail, dropping off mail and volunteers along the way. At one point, a log bridge had to be rebuilt before they could cross.

But by nightfall the Bopulu Peace Corps volunteers had what they needed to take care of the rats — a big white cat.

Alfalfa Is Forage Crop of Many Uses

College Station, Tex. (UPI)—Alfalfa is a forage crop with a wide variety of uses for the farmer, an extension specialist at Texas A&M college has said.

Ted Treweek pointed out alfalfa may be grazed, dehydrated, fed as green chop, made into silage or hay. It also is a top source of honey and a good soil builder, he said.
