Stockpile Values Increase Slightly

Washington –(UPI)– Sen. Harry F. Byrd said Tuesday the government still had excess stockpiles of 65 different items on Oct. 31, nine months after President Kennedy called for cuts in the stockpile program.

Byrd said the total value of national stockpiles increased slightly during October.

Many of the stockpile excesses above estimated needs actually have grown since Kennedy's Jan. 31 call for a congressional investigation of the program, Byrd said.

The Virginia Democrat's statement was made public along with the monthly report of his Senate-House Committee on Reduction of nonessential Federal Expenditures.

The committee said that 66 of the 76 items on which the government has maximum stockpile objectives were in excess as of Feb. 1. On Oct. 31, the figures showed, 65 of these were still in excess. The only drop was in hyoscine, a medical chemical.

Search Resumed For Lebanon Man

Albany –(UPI)– A search was resumed this morning for Herbert Knippel, 40, Lebanon, who auto was discovered in the South Santiam river near Sweet Home Sunday.

The Linn county sheriff's office here said the search started Monday and was halted Christmas day.

Doris Day Replaces Marilyn Monroe

Hollywood –(UPI)– Doris Day will replace the late Marilyn Monroe as the star of "Something's Got to Give," the movie Miss Monroe quit shortly before her death last Aug. 5.

20th Century-Fox Studios announced today that Miss Day will be given a revised script and that scenes already shot for the picture will be scrapped.

A spokesman for the studio said, "We are starting from the beginning, and Miss Day will have different costars."

The picture was started last summer with Dean Martin and Cyd Charisse, but was suspended in midproduction when Miss Monroe's health delayed filming. Later the studio filed suit against the blonde glamour girl.

Her death, due to an overdose of drugs, caused cancellation of the picture.

About 98 per cent of the white population of New Zealand is said to be of Ehglish ancestry.

Small Worlds Around Us

By LYNN M. WATKINS

(Register and Tribune Syndicate 1962)

Deformed Pine Tree Still Waging Struggle with Nature

The deformed pine tree was growing in an isolated section of the forest, not far from a small brook. From a two foot stump had grown, at right angles, the upward curving trunk, forming an almost perfect half - circle. From this curved section another normal trunk was growing upward.

Men with courage and trees with stamina often rise above their infirmities and misfortunes to succeed in spite of handicaps imposed on them by a cruel fate. Courage and pluck are powerful incentives. The indomitable will to survive transcends understanding. With these attributes, man or tree triumphs.

Adversity, accident, disease or wrongly applied pressure often activate man or tree to tower above misfortune and succeed in a world that even the strong and normal believe is too competitive to endure.

Accident Occurred

Some 10 or 15 years ago an accident must have occurred to the pine tree. Another tree, larger and heavier, may have fallen on the pine, or some other agency bent it double until the trunk nearly snapped, but held in a downward position. There is no way of knowing just what did happen or what pressure was brought to bear that caused the present deformity. What was the trunk was pressed to the earth and held there in a prone position. The tree was sorely wounded – almost destroyed.

But somewhere within its tissues was the tenacity to live, to try again, to reach up into the light. Refusing to give up, which would have been the easy way, it struggled desperately to survive. It aspired to grow and fulfill its destined purpose in spite of a deformity it could never outgrow. It desired, above all else, to become a tree, a deformed tree amid an entire forest of normal trees.

It is probably fortunate that this silent struggle for survival took place in an isolated forest away from where men work and away from the eyes of those who would very likely have chopped down the tree just because it was unusual and different. Because it was a freak would have been justification enough for some thoughtless or greedy money hungry jerk with an ax or saw to cut it down.

Silent Contest

However it is still alive and growing, only because it is at present inaccessible and unknown. The struggle it is waging is a silent contest between itself and the forces of Nature. It lives in darkness and in the sunlight. Rains beat upon its twisted form. Occasionally birds alight in its upper branches. It is in its own environment, one with the forest that surrounds it. The winds sweep free around it in this way it is as normal as the other plants of the forest.

It is unfortunate that it cannot long endure. Someone soon will discover it and cut it down, carry it away to make a mailbox standard or some other novelty. The tree is too conspicuously unusual to escape detection and destruction for very long. Today it is a living freak, a twisted caricature, a monstrosity among normal trees.

But regardless of what will evenutally happen, it has lived for a little time; it has struggled and has attempted to lead a normal life. In a way it has succeeded. It has defied adversity, misfortune and a severe physical handicap.

Two People Hurt in Highway Accident

Two persons suffered minor injuries and three cars sustained heavy damage in an accident yesterday afternoon on Table Rock rd. near the entrance to the Airport, rd., state police said.

Arthabel Frazier, 39, of 740 Lawnsdale rd., one driver, was treated by a phy sician for neck injuries, and Steven Marshal McKercher, 19, of route 1, box 491, Central Point, a passenger in the Frazier car, suffered a bump on the head, but neither was taken to the hospital, state police said.

The Frazier car was involved in an accident with cars driven by Lyle Harris Walther Jr., 18, of 5392 Gebhard rd., Central Point, and Charles Walker Haa-, 17, of 1006 Niantic st., Medford.
