

HOMEY

Miami Beach, Fla. — (UPI) — Saunas (Finnish baths) will be available at all times at the new Doral Beach hotel, opening here in January, because, said owner Alfred L. Kaskel, so many of his friends have them and he wants them to feel at home when they're at his hotel.

Jesse James Name Of Guide, Hideout Cave

Stanton, Mo.—(UPI)—One of the guides at Meramec Caverns here is named Jesse James—no relation to the outlaw who used the five-story deep cave as a hideout in the 1870's.

"As many tourists are intrigued by his name as by the fact the outlaw used to hide out here," said director Lester B. Dill.

"The society has issued—in English, naturally—a report paying tribute to English."

"No other language has served a greater variety of needs, or come closer to the mythical goal of a world tongue," the society said. "As the speech of civil aviation, it has reached the far corners of the earth. Half the world's newspapers and scientific journals are published in English, making it second only to Chinese."

English Official
"Hindustani comes next; yet India, its homeland, retains English as an official language," the society said.

Why is English so popular? "The international appeal of English lies in its flexibility," the society said. "While precise enough to be a tool of science, it possesses the delicate shades of meaning required for literary purposes. Foreign speakers appreciate the abundance of short, punchy words."

Of the more than one million words in the English vocabulary, about 75 per cent are derived from foreign sources, according to the society.

It said the immediate ancestor of English was a Teutonic dialect spoken by tribesmen on the North Sea coast between Holland and Denmark.

"In the Fifth century, many of these people—the Angles, Jutes, and Saxons—settled England," it said. "The descendants of tribesmen who stayed on the continent still use a version of the original language, Low German or Frisian."

Gaelic and Welsh
"Celtic Britons, who were driven by Germanic invaders, left the ingredients of modern Gaelic and Welsh. But their influence on the Anglo-Saxons was insignificant."

The next wave of colonists, the Danes and Norsemen, contributed about 900 words, including such indispensables as egg and sky.

Such words of Latin derivation as bishop, altar and candle came from missionaries from these continents.

"After the Norman conquest in 1066, French became the language of the upper classes though the Church and law courts retained Latin," the society said. "Anglo-Saxon, which had attained sophistication with epics like Beowulf, ceased to exist in written form. It was cherished, however, as the spoken tongue of England's peasantry."

The society's chronology then reported a "vigorous comeback" by English, absorbing the language of the Norman nobility during the 14th and 15th centuries.

"Meanwhile," the society said, "Geoffrey Chaucer, using the Midland dialect of London, emerged as the literary father of modern English."

The Renaissance contributed 10,000 new words from all over Europe.

Traders and explorers brought further additions to the tongue—tea and bamboo from China and Malaya; hurricane, tobacco and tomato from New World Indians.

Prelate Made Member Of Bricklayers Union
Cleveland—(UPI)—Cleveland bricklayers decided to take action after seeing dozens of newspaper pictures of non-union Archbishop John J. Krol laying the cornerstone of churches, schools, hospitals and orphanages.

The bricklayers called a meeting, took a vote—and made the prelate an honorary member of the Bricklayers and Masons union of Cleveland.

English Close to Universal Tongue

United Press International Washington—(UPI)—"Okay."

This word of approval, according to the National Geographic society, is probably the world's most widely used and understood.

The society has issued—in English, naturally—a report paying tribute to English.

Stolen Silverware Is Donated To Charity

New York—(UPI)—Somebody stole six silver forks and four knives from the swank Stanhope hotel on Fifth avenue and then donated them to a charity.

The silverware, plainly engraved with the hotel's name, was returned to general manager John F. Isard recently by a woman volunteer charity worker, who said it was among merchandise donated to her organization by an unknown "benefactor." Isard accepted the knives and forks with thanks and donated several luncheons to the charity.
