

Democrats Will Look Westward For Party Power

Washington - (UPI) - Congressional Democrats will look westward for their party strength in 1963.

When the 88th Congress convenes Jan. 9, House Democrats will find their largest state delegation comes from California, which gave 24 of its 38 seats to the Democrats in the November elections.

Reapportionment of congressional districts based on the 1960 census figured in the California gain. The state was allotted 38 seats, eight more than before. The Democrats made a net gain of eight seats in the November balloting.

Kennedy Support
On crucial House votes, the White House expects more solid support for President Kennedy's liberal proposals from California Democrats than from either New York or Texas Democrats.

There were a few defections from the party line within the New York delegation on some close issues in the last Congress. And Texas, of course, is split ideologically with more conservatives than liberals among its Democratic delegation.

Because of its numerical strength, the California Democratic delegation can be expected to receive more consideration from House party leaders and from the White House when it comes to passing out political plums and favors.

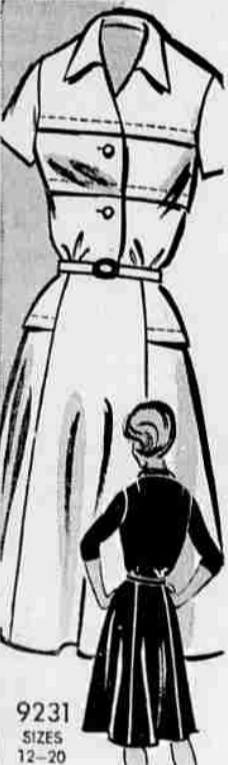

Seeks Teamwork
Rep. Harry R. Sheppard (D-Calif.), dean of the delegation who celebrates his 78th birthday the day after the new Congress convenes, has high hopes that California Democrats will be able to cut a bigger political swath in the nation's capital.

However, Sheppard realizes that the extent to which the delegation will be able to "wheel and deal" will depend largely on the extent to which it manages to operate as a team rather than as a group of "individualistic" congressmen.

Nine of the California Democrats will be freshmen. They make up one-fourth of the 36 Democratic freshmen congressmen.

The delegation's first objective will be to get its new members assigned to committees so they can begin climbing the seniority ladder which leads - after many years - to chairmanships.
