Rose V. — My affair isn't hurting anybody.

Stuart S. — The man will drop her and then where will she be?

Rose V. — I'm close to 40 but people take me for about 30. I've been separated from my husband for 10 years now, although neither of us has pressed for a divorce.

Four years ago I met a wonderful man in the office where I was working. He is single and has made it clear he intends to remain so. I have accepted his terms, and from then on have had the only real happiness of my life.

My brother is after me to end the friendship or to insist upon a marriage. There's no good reason to do either.

Stuart S. — I'm mortified at what Rose is doing. She thinks nothing of staying overnight at this fellow's apartment, walking up and down the streets of my neighborhood with him, and encouraging tongues to wag whenever she meets people who know us.

Her affair can lead to no good. What if she became pregnant? She says the man would take care of her through some common-law wife arrangement. But with a guy who's in the habit of ducking all responsibility, I'll bet she'd find herself deserted.

And any day now he'll discover she's several years older than he. Her cosmetics can't hide the truth forever. The whole business is dishonest and immoral.

The bottom will fall out of Rose's rickety life and then she'll come crying to me.
