

Workmen Preparing Capitol for Opening of Legislature

52nd Assembly Begins Monday; Caucuses Set

By ZAN STARK
Salem—UPI—An air of hurried activity settled over the Capitol Building today as legislative leaders, workmen, movers and clerks made last minute preparations for the 52nd legislative assembly which convenes Monday.

Both the House and Senate chambers were swarming with window washers, furniture dusters and floor sweepers.

In the House chamber, where Gov. Mark Hatfield will deliver his biennial legislative address next Monday afternoon, electricians were installing huge lights so television cameras could broadcast the proceedings live.

Microphones were being installed and tested on desks of senators and representatives.

Telephone installers were everywhere adding extensions or setting up new phones for lobbyists.

Leaders Arrive
Rep. Clarence Barton, (D-Coquille), speaker-designate of the House, opened his office on the third floor behind the house chamber.

Senate President-designate Ben Musa (D-The Dalles), moved into his command post.

House Majority Leader-designate Richard Eymann (D-Mohawk), began making the rounds to greet legislators who were gathering from every part of the state.

A visitor to the governor's office was told by a secretary, "We won't be able to schedule an appointment for you with the governor for more than two weeks - the legislature is convening, and we're very busy."

Arrangements were being made to add desks and typewriters to the regular press room as the regular press corps was expanded.

Lobbyists extended cheery greetings to legislators and department heads, and introduced themselves to newcomers.

Parking Spaces Painted
Newly-spainted parking spaces in front of the capitol reflected the names of the 60 house members and 30 senators.

Capitol departments scheduled staggered lunch hours to help ease the noontime rush that occurs every other year in the capitol cafeteria.

Sunday night House and Senate members will caucus to formally elect officers and adopt rules for the 1963 session.

Then Monday morning, Jan. 14, the gavel will sound in each house as it gathers for the official opening.

The short meeting will be followed in the afternoon by a joint session of the two houses as Hatfield is sworn in as governor for his second term.

Tuesday each house will adjourn after a brief session for a day-long orientation meeting to explain procedures to newcomers and help veterans brush up.

On Wednesday each house will convene and begin tackling the job of drafting the laws and budgets that will guide Oregon for the coming two years.

Duncan Election Revives Seashore Park Interest

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent
Washington (Special)—A new face in the Oregon congressional lineup this week, that of Rep. Robert Duncan, Medford Democrat, may bring a fresh slant to some of the Northwest issues facing the 88th Congress when it convenes Wednesday.

Congressman Duncan's election has already revived Kennedy administration interest in Sen. Maurice Neuberger's bill for creating an Oregon Dune national seashore park. He succeeds Rep. Edwin R. Durno, who opposed the Neuberger bill and favored recreational development of the present national forest area along the coast by the Forest Service.

Because of the resistance of Durno and the Forest Service, the administration withheld support for the Neuberger bill during the 87th Congress. While it was thus sidetracked, new seashore parks were created at Cape Cod, Mass., Padre Island, Tex., and Point Reyes, Calif.

Wants Modest Proportions
Duncan has indicated he will support a national park but one of more modest proportions, excluding the inland lakes and private summer homes east of Highway 101, which the National Park Service wanted to be included. Even before Duncan's election, Sen. Neuberger said he would be willing to exclude much of this most controversial area—a compromise bill is likely early in the coming congressional session.

Election of Duncan may also influence the outcome of the coming battle over a Northwest-California electric power intertie, especially if he is assigned to the House Interior Committee, on which Durno served. Last summer that committee bottled up a Senate-passed bill to give the Northwest a regional preference on use of Columbia river power in the event any surplus energy is exported to other regions.

Interior Secretary Stewart Udall plans a major effort this session to seek congressional approval of appropriations to start construction of a federal transmission line linking the Bonneville system in Oregon with the Bureau of Reclamation's system in central California.

Another measure of wide interest which died in the House Interior Committee last fall was the wilderness bill, designating numerous primitive and wild areas in the na-

Mona Lisa Makes U.S. Debut Tonight

Washington—UPI—Smiling, the Mona Lisa will go on display tonight in a country that was more interested in arrowheads than art when Leonardo da Vinci painted the enigmatic lady.

But it is doubtful she is disturbed by her American debut. The Florentine matron has an adventurous history behind her.

There were Delaware Indians living along the banks of the Potomac river when da Vinci painted the portrait sometime during the period of 1503-06. About a million of the new inhabitants of the Potomac area and other sections of the United States are expected to visit her during her stay at the National Art Gallery here.

French Culture Minister Andre Malraux will conduct the first group of visitors to a red carpet welcome for the Mona Lisa tonight.

Guests at the welcoming ceremonies will include President and Mrs. Kennedy and French Ambassador and Mme. Herve Alphand.

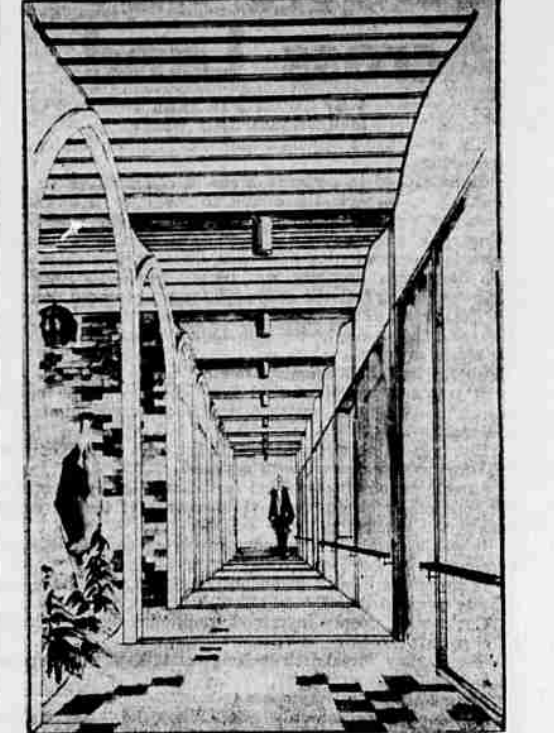

The portrait will be placed on public exhibition Wednesday for the first time in the United States.

Sold for $10,000
The history of the Mona Lisa began when da Vinci painted the portrait of an Italian nobleman's wife on a piece of poplar wood. A few years later the portrait was sold to King Francis I of France for 4,000 gold ducats — about $10,000.

Francis took the painting to his palace at Fontainebleau, near Paris, where it remained for over 150 years. Gradually his successors moved their headquarters to the famous Versailles Palace and in 1695 the painting followed. After an 11-year stay there, the Mona Lisa moved again, this time to a wing of the Tuileries Palace later to be known as the Louvre, Paris' world-renowned art museum.

In 1911, the long period of tranquility came to an end. An overly zealous Italian patriot, deciding that the work of an Italian master had no place in a French museum, stole the famous painting, leaving only the frame as a souvenir.

Police Recover Painting
It was missing for two years. Then a Florence art dealer reported to the local police that he had been asked to buy the work, and the thief was finally arrested in a cheap hotel room. After a brisk debate in the Italian

House Damaged by Fire in Medford

Extensive damage to the interior of a house at 833 Ellen dr. was caused by heat and smoke as the result of a fire Monday afternoon, Medford firemen reported.

Damaged was the residence of Gerald E. Wicks.

No one was in the house when the fire broke out. It was first noticed by children playing nearby who heard the sound of flames, firemen said.

The fire apparently started behind a television set next to a wall heater.
