Importance of Quality in Foods, Told by Speaker

Ashland - Choice of foods and the importance of quality merchandise were stressed by Carson Vehrs who addressed the January 2 meeting of the Women's Civic club, Oregon Federation of Women's clubs.

The new director of dormitories at Southern Oregon college told his audience many ways in which to judge foods and even demonstrated his talk by comparison of three cuts of beef. He expressed the opinion that fresh cuts are preferable to packaged meats and that injecting of enzymes into animals before butchering will tenderize the meat and reduce aging time but it also increases spoilage speed. Mr. Vehrs advised careful choice of canned and processed foods and said that every housewife should make it a practice to read labels before buying. He said that a good vegetable and produce department usually indicates good grocery and meat departments.

Prices Higher - According to the speaker fresh food prices are higher from Thanksgiving to April and it is usually better to purchase canned fruits and vegetables during that period. He suggested that the club members write to the Home Extension department at Oregon State university, Corvallis, for free information and regular bulletins.

The club president, Mrs. Bert Roberts, conducted the business session and Mrs. Elden Corthell, international affairs chairman, read parts of Congressman Edwin Durno's latest letter which had to do with foreign aid and domestic needs. She also gave brief excerpts from the Farm Journal.

In a general discussion of murder involving sex crimes and its punishment, members agreed to write letters to state representatives asking that immediate measures be taken to make such offenses punishable by life imprisonment.

Hostesses for the noon covered dish luncheon were Mrs. Verne Templer, Mrs. Clifford Maust, Mrs. A. A. Ahrendt and Mrs. W. R. Otey. Mrs. Ella Henderson was the day's program chairman.

Next, soup was served by Diane Hewlett at her home. Colorful fruit gelatin salads were served by Cheryl Nelson and Diane Hatcher at the Nelson home. A main course of spaghetti was served by Jan Morris and Marilyn Young at the Morris home. Jan Morris and Norma Yandell played carols on the piano.

The next stop was the White home where a pinata, made by Barbara White and Susan Gannon, was broken and found to contain homemade taffy and other candy. Finally hot chocolate, cookies and apples were served by Kathy Hiatt and Norma Yandell at the Hiatt home.

The food was all prepared and served by the girls, who also did the table settings and decorations. Accompanying the girls were Mrs. George Gannon, leader of the troop, and Mrs. William White, assistant leader.

Guests - Hornbrook-Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bear were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Davis and granddaughters, Trista and Angela Kaiser, all of Medford.

Ashland BPWC Hears Talk About 'Mental Health'

Ashland - In keeping with the year's theme of "Opening Doors" the January 2 meeting of the Business and Professional Women opened the door with a full length mirror reflecting outer personal appearance and afterward were given a glimpse of inner development by Miss Ethel Shumway who spoke on "Mental Health."

Miss Shumway, who is a psychiatric social worker and director of the Jackson County Family Counseling and Child Guidance clinic, declared "there is no use carrying a big bag of mental recriminations on your back - especially into the new year."

Life follows a pattern of ups and downs and one must learn to swing with them in order to keep a balance, she said. Most important is learning to know and accept one's self and to use all of one's potentialities, while at the same time accepting certain limitations.

The speaker defined a mature person not by chronological age, but rather by his ability to be effective and genuine at any age. She stressed the need for accepting as well as giving love and quoted from the Diary of Anne Frank the words, "We build new bridges of human companionship until we die."

Miss Shumway was introduced by Mrs. A. J. Kanciler, Mrs. Horace Myers, chairman of the personal development committee, was in charge of the program. Others on the committee were Miss Naomi Grant and Mrs. Adele Thompson.

In the absence of the president, Miss Ruth Beber, the business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Richard Westfield, first vice president.

A table featured New Year and wintertime decorations against a large gold framed antique mirror. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Grace Flint and Mrs. Thompson.

February 6 will mark the fifth birthday of the club and will be celebrated by a 6:30 p.m. covered dish dinner served at Wesley house, followed by the annual program of the BPWC traveling team.
