With the engineering and mechanical marvels that surround us in this crazy, mixed-up age of space satellites, guided missiles, super-duper bombs and the like, folks like you and me wonder when they're going to let us share in the scientific advances of our time.

After all, we say, "aren't our cars pretty basically the same? Don't they run on the same old piston-driven gasoline engine? Why not build us a cheap car that will run on atomic power?"

Well, unless things change radically within the next few years, atomic automobiles will never be built. And for good reason. The shielding for a reactor would be too heavy. And, in the event of collisions, the danger of contamination is simply too great.

That doesn't mean all hope for perfect driving is lost, however. Just drive in to CARL'S EASTSIDE SHELL and let us give you present car a complete service. You can depend on miles and miles of smooth performance when Shell products are in your car—especially when applied by efficient attendants at CARL'S. That's 700 E.
