RECORD BUDGET, DEBT, DEBT INTEREST

Virtually every U. S. government financial statistic which President Kennedy is now starting to submit to Congress and which we will appear downright awful in terms of our nation's traditional concepts about thrift, living within our means at least once in a while, holding down our debts, paying the minimum interest we can arrange on our I. O. U. s. Here's a preview of what's to come:

(1) The federal budget for the year to begin July 1, 1963, will be the biggest ever, in global war or peace. It will be under $100 billion only because the White House months ago sent an urgent order to the Budget Bureau to pare money requests by government departments and agencies wherever possible.

(2) As a starter, the deficit in this budget will be estimated at $7.5 billion-plus. This won't take into consideration what could be the initial impact of tax cuts and, of course, it's just a guess, for this budget is to cover a period which won't end until 18 months from now. It will mark the third budget deficit in Kennedy's three years of office, the fourth deficit in a row. It will come on top of a deficit estimated at $7.8 billion from the 1962 fiscal year, a deficit of $8.3 billion chalked up in 1962, of $3.8 billion recorded in 1961.

(3) The national debt will be projected at well over $308 billion during calendar year 1963—above the legal limit now set by law. This means Kennedy will have to ask Congress to boost this limit in the middle of the debate about tax reduction—about as embarrassing a coincidence of timing as could be imagined. He must request authorization of the first hike in March, for under the law Congress passed in 1961, the legal limit is slated to drop to $305 billion April 1, to $300 billion June 24, to $285 billion July 1. With the national debt already above $305 billion, Congress must vote the boosts, for otherwise the U. S. government would have to default on its obligations. That's unthinkable.

(4) Interest on the national debt will be projected at way over $10 billion, a record, and representing the biggest single item in the budget outside of defense. This means that more than 10 cents of every dollar we'll be paying in taxes this year will go just to pay interest to holders of the U. S. government's I. O. U. s.

There it is, a dismal fiscal picture indeed—and this, mind you, is the U. S. government's situation after 23 months of business advance to the highest levels ever achieved by our economy.

Question No. 1: How, then does the administration propose and Congress pass a law to reduce taxes—for at the beginning there is no doubt that tax cuts would swell the deficit and the debt?

Answer No. 1: On the basis that without tax cuts to spur consumer and business spending, there is little hope that we'll be prosperous enough to create the taxes to balance the budget. Our deficit will continue indefinitely, our debt and debt interest will climb and climb. But with stimulating tax cuts, the odds are good that bigger profits and paychecks will produce enough taxes to bring federal outgo and income into balance and put us in sound financial shape at last.

Question No. 2: Won't this combination of money-creating deficits and debt send us into another inflationary spiral?

Answer No. 2: The odds are against renewed inflation in our economy of slack production, high unemployment, surpluses and fierce competition. Also, the Treasury and Federal Reserve System are determined to finance the deficits via the least inflationary methods—meaning, the Treasury will pay the interest rates needed to attract savings in our country and will hold to a minimum borrowing through the banks which would lay the base for an explosive expansion of buying power.

Thus, President Kennedy will be asking Congress to take a calculated gamble to get our economy back into a cycle of strong, sustained growth—the only fundamental solution to a balanced budget and stabilized national debt as well as full employment and production.

Loaded Truck Tips Over Near Freeway

A truck trailer turned over at Highway 62 and Interstate 5 yesterday afternoon, damaging about 35 feet of guard rail and spilling a load of lumber on the roadway and its embankment, according to Medford city police.

Driver of the truck, Morris Lester Frink, 43, Central Point, told investigating officers the load on the trailer shifted as he attempted to negotiate the turn onto the freeway.

The truck tractor was pulling two trailers. The rear trailer turned over completely, officers said. It took about two hours to reload the trailer. Frink was not injured in the mishap, according to reports.

Pomp, Gaiety Mark Opening Of Legislature

Salem—UPI—The 1963 Oregon legislature convened Monday with pomp and gaiety that belied the hard problems ahead.

Lights glared in the Senate and House as television cameras recorded the colorful ceremonies.

Everything was conducted according to printed scripts handed out in advance in both houses — except for one surprise departure in the lower house.

That came when a few staunch members of the minority Republican party insisted on putting their own man up for the speakership.

The rest of the house went along with the brief ad-lib, and Rep. Clarence Barton was elected anyway as planned.

One of the most solemn moments came when senators and representatives took their oaths of office standing by their desks in the elegant wood-paneled chambers.

Rep. Grace Peck wore a large orchid, and jars of candy and confections reappeared on her desk.

There was a bustle of activity as lawmakers and their aides got settled, greeted old friends, and rehearsed the script one more time.

In a day or so, the cameras will go, and the senators and representatives will get down to the less glittering shirt-sleeve ordeal of deciding how to conduct Oregon's affairs of state and how to pay for it.
