Biology Institute Set at University Try and Stop Me By BENNETT CERF

Eugene - Applications are being accepted at the University of Oregon from high school and college teachers of biology in an academic year institute at the university which will run from September, 1963, to June, 1964. Five college teachers and 15 high school teachers will be selected to participate in the institute, which will pay stipends of $3,000 for the academic year, plus allowances for travel, books, and dependents. The institute is financed by a grant of $128,800 from the National Science Foundation. All applications for the institute must be postmarked not later than Jan. 20. The institute will offer training in teaching advanced placement biology in the high school and general biology in the college and junior college. This is the third year that such an institute has been given at the University of Oregon under grants from the National Science Foundation. Director of the institute is Dr. Sanford S. Tepper, associate professor of biology at the university. Overheard by Mike Connolly in a Beverly Hills TV studio: "And just when I was able, finally, through my relentless logic, to convince her of the absurdity of her argument - she hauled off and socked me!"

Real Estate Commissioner Urges State Subdivision Law

Passage of a subdivision law at this session of the Oregon legislature was strongly recommended here by Robert Jensen, state real estate commissioner, when he recently spoke before the "largest meeting in the history of the Medford Board of Realtors." Jensen urged all attending at the annual session at the Rogue Valley County club to work for this legislation to correct the existing problem before the federal government finds it necessary to step in to protect the public. "If we ourselves do not do something about this problem, by effecting a subdivision law in the state of Oregon, the federal government will," Jensen declared. "I believe government should step in only when people can't help themselves. I also believe the state should be allowed to solve its own problem before the federal government acts. It is our responsibility to see that people who purchase land are told the truth and given what they are promised, as would be shown in a required public report to be given each prospective purchaser." The state commissioner explained that such a report would inform the purchaser of which property he is buying, location and distance to schools, type of roads in the area and provisions for their maintenance. At the present time subdivisions are not under the realtor's jurisdiction. It is the commissioner's belief, he told his audience, that subdividers had for the state's economy, Jensen warned. Down the Drain "Every time a citizen invests $1,000 in New Mexico, Arizona, or some other state, in poor land, it is $1,000 down the drain that might have been invested in good property in our state," he explained. "Believe with me that a law protecting the public is necessary, not only for protecting the people in Oregon from unscrupulous promoters outside the state, but also for the protection of people outside the state who would want to purchase in Oregon. I have never said anything more sincerely in my life," the commissioner summarized in closing his plea for action at the 1963 legislature. The Oregon commissioner will have an opportunity to give views since he was recently appointed chairman of the education committee of the National Association of License Law Officials. He also was elected a director of this association representing nine western states and the Province of British Columbia. He is a member of the Committee on Rackets in Real Estate.
