Rep. Green Needles Hatfield, Others on Education Spending

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Mail Tribune Washington Bureau

Washington (Special) — Rep. Edith Green has obliquely needed Gov. Mark Hatfield and other Oregon leaders for their reluctance in spending more money for educational facilities which she believes provide magnets that will attract new space age industry to Oregon.

"Oregon is better off than a great many of the states," she said last week. "and yet there is a financial crisis in education. So the Governor this year recommended about 50 per cent of the money that people in higher education say they must have to carry on their programs. This is not the time to cut back, but rather the time to expand."

In commenting on Gov. Edmund Brown's boast that it wasn't so much political pull that brought the flood of industry to California, but the excellence of its institutions of higher learning which provided the research that industry wanted and needed, Mrs. Green said:

"New industries have located around Cal Tech and they are there for one reason—the research facilities available. The area around Berkeley is fast building up. Why? Because of the graduate research facilities."

"There is great urgency for Portland to get on with the task of providing the Graduate Research Center, and I know other cities are talking about the same thing now."

Mrs. Green has introduced legislation which she said could be of benefit to the Research center. It will authorize spending $75 million for the first and $150 million during the second year in federal funds to construct cooperative educational centers in 15 areas throughout the country.

She thinks that the colleges in Oregon in close proximity could share specialized facilities and develop programs that are beyond the financial resources of single institutions. She said that through cooperative efforts the curricula of all colleges participating in an educational center might be broadened and enriched through the offering of courses which no single institution could afford or could justify.

She suggested that it could possibly offer the facilities and attract the learned faculty for instruction in the languages, culture and history of some of the newly emerging countries of the world; or provide an engineering laboratory with its expensive equipment. She thinks such institutions might raise the quality of education by enabling outstanding scholars to devote their full teaching time to the specialized field of their choice.

Speaking at Harvard college last week, Mrs. Green warned that the projection of figures for the 1970s indicate that in Communist Europe and China there will be far more students enrolled in their colleges and universities than in the United States and Western Europe.

"... there is now new urgency—because not just our way of life—but our life—our very survival may depend on the degree of excellence (of our educational system)," she said at Harvard and reiterated in an interview.

She noted that in the days of the industrial revolution skilled workers were needed and the demand for intellectuals was not as great as it is in the space age. Experts say the need for masses of intellectuals isn't being met.

Mrs. Green is also concerned about the explosion in the cities caused by dropouts from school of deprived and discontented youth. The Nation's Capital has just witnessed a fearful explosion by young Negroes in an attack

Three Oregonians Perish in Crashes

By United Press International

Three persons lost their lives in traffic accidents in Oregon during the week end.

Otis Huffman, 36, Hermiston, was killed when his pickup truck went off State Highway 32 and overturned near Hermiston Saturday.

A 56-year-old woman died in a one-car accident on the Redwood Highway near Grants Pass Saturday. The victim was Mrs. Gertrude Glidden of Selma.

Rodney Morrison, 22, Beaverton, was killed when his sports car overturned and crushed him near Beaverton early Saturday.

In addition, Mrs. Florence Nelson, 59, Portland, died at a hospital Sunday where she had been under treatment for injuries suffered when she was hit by a car in Portland Dec. 30.

kind of education—otherwise they will become the unemployables who will end up on the welfare rolls, or collecting unemployment insurance."

Statistics show that the hardcore of the unemployed are Negroes, who have been denied adequate education and opportunity to acquire skills and jobs. The Nation's Capital has roughly 33,000 functional illiterates and staggering welfare costs. Chicago, with similar problems has instituted an enforced educational program to enable the illiterates to read and write to enable them to qualify for jobs.

Guy Marks Image Of Starved Poet, Television Mimic

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Hollywood — (UPI) — The ability to imitate a housefly on a slippery oil cloth is a tenuous hold on show business immortality, but comedian Guy Marks has parlayed this talent into a regular job on the Joey Bishop television series.

As a 56-year-old woman, tall and loose-jointed, Marks has the look of a chronic loser at the race track — precisely the case with him.

In addition to the housefly, he imitates neon signs, alligators, driftwood furniture, rubber bands, frozen chickens and a praying mantis. He is particularly proud of his impression of an ostrich.

When pressed he will do Boris Karloff and Humphrey Bogart as well.

Melancholy
From his choice of subjects it doesn't take a trained psychologist to detect a note of melancholy in Marks who would make an excellent model for a starving poet.

But beneath his austere exterior beats a lively sense of humor.

Doubtless he inherited his wit from his parents, Ermelindo and Aelina Scarpa of Abruzzi, Italy, and more recently, Philadelphia, Pa.

"They both were blessed with a good sense of humor," Marks said, coughing heavily. "I am the youngest of their nine living children. My real name is Mario, after the hero in the opera 'La Tosca,' which my mother admired when she was carrying me."

"Their humor cropped up in naming some of my brothers and sisters. I have two brothers — named Theistocles and Aristides.

"Among the girls there is Mafalda, Yolanda, Melba, and Gioconda. I guess I got off easy with the name bit."

Marks comes by his dour appearance honestly, having worked as a florist, busboy, drill press operator, truck driver, merchant seaman, cab driver, ham pickler and other difficult assignments.

During most of his life he has been an avid gambler, finally settling on the ponies after years at dice and cards.

"For years I only worked night clubs that were close to a race track," he said, coughing again and running his hand through a shock of black hair.

Real People
"When you get to know real horse people you realize how fine humanity can be. They're good hearted. I mean the ones who enjoy the track, the horses and the surroundings, not just the gambling aspects of the races."

Marks considers himself an educated horse player but admits dolefully, "I'm still a loser."

After spending most of his life traveling across the country with his night club act and at assorted odd jobs, the comedian is delighted to be working steadily in a popular television series.

"But it has drawbacks, too," he complained. "Out here in California I miss the falling leaves of autumn, the swirl of snow past

James Meredith Not Expected To Return to School

Washington — (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said today the chances at the present time are that James Meredith will leave the University of Mississippi.

Kennedy said he did not think Meredith made a mistake in integrating the university.

"I think that's a difficult area, but Meredith decided he wanted to do it and these decisions are up to the individual," he said.

If Meredith does quit, Kennedy said, it would make future integration efforts in such states as Alabama or South Carolina more difficult.

Everybody in the United States has contributed something, because the taxpayer's money has been used," he added.

Kennedy gave these views and others about the first two years of his brother's administration in a copyrighted interview with "U.S. News and World Report."

Asked about the attempted invasion of Cuba by refugees, the attorney general said he wanted to clear up reports that the President withdrew air cover from the operation.

Some have blamed the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion on the lack of protective air cover when the force was on the Cuban beach being attacked by Castro's small air force.

Kennedy said the President "never withdrew U.S. air cover. There was never any plan to have U.S. air cover."

Although planning for the invasion was primarily the responsibility of the Central Intelligence Agency, Kennedy said, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President approved the plan.

However, he said "the plans and the recommendations obviously were not adequate."

Doctors To Attend Podiatry Seminar
Drs. Arnold M. Depner and Robert D. Gallagher of Medford will be in Portland Friday and Saturday attending a post-graduate seminar on podiatry.

Foot specialists from ten cities will attend the meetings. Dr. Henri L. DuVries, California surgeon, will conduct three four-hour workshops on X-ray techniques, general diagnostics and surgical or non-surgical therapy.

Local Men To Attend Assembly

Two Medford businessmen will be among those attending the Pacific Northwest assembly next month at the Village Green near Cottage Grove.

Attending from Medford will be Eric W. Allen Jr., managing editor of the Medford Mail Tribune, and William J. Williams, president of the Medford Chamber of Commerce, who is with Harry and David corporation.

National leaders in the field of automation will be speakers for the assembly Feb. 7 through 10. The event is cosponsored by the University of Oregon and is being held in cooperation with the American assembly at Columbia university, which was founded in 1950 by Dwight D. Eisenhower when he was president of Columbia. It is a national, nonpartisan, educational organization which regularly holds national and local meetings and publishes books on vital current topics.

The topic of the assembly will be "The Impact of Automation and Technological Change." About 65 community opinion formers from business, education, labor, government, and the professions from five states will attend. The participants will be from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

Alice Thompson Receives Honors
Alice A. Thompson, route 1, box 546, Central Point, is one of 59 juniors at Oregon State university selected for junior honors on the basis of outstanding scholarship.

To qualify, students must have a grade point average of B plus or better for their first two years of work. Junior honors are awarded by the campus chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society.

Miss Thompson is majoring in the school of science.

Manno Attends Board Of Directors Session

Anthony R. Manno, owner of Acme Hardware company, attended the annual four day meeting of the board of directors of the National Retail Hardware association in Indianapolis, Ind.

Manno has been a member of the board of directors since 1954. Having served as president, he is currently on the advisory committee.

Committee Urged To Balance Budget

Washington — (UPI) — Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) in effect asked his House Appropriations Committee today to trim President Kennedy's record $98.8 billion budget by $12 billion.

As the committee began the first of its session-long money hearings, Cannon declined to pinpoint possible cuts or pick a specific dollar objective for savings. But he told a reporter the committee's goal should be "at least" to balance the budget.

Kennedy's spending plans, the highest on record for peacetime or war, contemplate a deficit of $11.9 billion in the 12 months starting next July 1.

Cannon conceded "it would be a miracle" if Congress actually succeeded in imposing budget cuts of this magnitude.

Rep. Ben F. Jensen (R-Iowa), the committee's top Republican member, recommended specific possible savings totalling $8 billion, including a 3 per cent cut in civilian federal payrolls.

State Police Check Accident Sunday

A car driven by Robert Leo Sevek Jr., 26 of 1054 South Grape st., struck a car driven by Herbert Donald Bradley, 33, of 361 O'Gara st., Sunday on the South Pacific highway just south of Medford, state police said.

The Bradley car had stopped for a car ahead making a left turn and the Sevek car was unable to stop.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N. Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain — without surgery.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The half-inch "insurance policy" that protects your Savings Bonds

Although a $25 U.S. Savings Bond is a promise from the government to pay you $25 for $18.75, the Bond itself is only paper. Which means it can be burned, stolen, washed away in a flood, tattered by termites, or thrown away with the garbage by mistake (all of which have happened).

In no case do you lose your money. For the U.S. Treasury has a microfilm record of your Bond, hidden away in a secret vault, and has registered your name as its owner.

This kind of safety is one of the reasons why tens of millions of American families own $45 billion worth of Savings Bonds—part of the reserve of savings which makes these families so strong and independent. And their strength is the strength of the nation. What's more, the dollars you put into Bonds help your country stand up for the cause of freedom at a time when freedom's enemies are more determined than ever to have their way.

You can buy Savings Bonds at any bank, or on Payroll Savings where you work. Why not start today, and see if you don't feel pretty good about it.

Quick facts about U.S. Savings Bonds

- You get 3 1/2% interest to maturity
- You can get your money anytime
- You can save automatically on Payroll Savings

Keep freedom in your future with U.S. SAVINGS BONDS
