Audience Enjoys 'Beautiful People' Production at MHS

Those who enjoy the plays and other writings of that refreshing and unique personality, William Saroyan, should see "The Beautiful People" being presented by the Theatrical troupe of Medford High school. The play, done arena style, opened last night in Room 61 at Medford High school and will be repeated tonight and Saturday night. It begins at 8 p.m.

Saroyan, of Armenian descent, has greatly enriched the American scene with his humor, philosophy and deep understanding of the needs of human beings. In "The Beautiful People" he writes of one family—a father, daughter and two sons leading uninhibited and rather carefree lives attuned to what the father believes are the true values—if not quite the orthodox ones of others.

Registration for Classes Still Open

Registration for adult education courses will continue through next week, according to Lindsay Vinsel, director of the program.

So far the greatest interest has been shown in typing, bookkeeping, speed reading, Bishop clothing, and oil painting.

Classes in the general educational field include business law, speed reading, public speaking, German, French, Spanish, English review, arithmetic review, algebra and citizenship for the foreign born.

Hobby and craft classes include rocks and minerals, photography, oil painting, and drawing and sketching.

Business education classes include briefhand, shorthand, office machines, bookkeeping and typing.

Homemaking classes still open are knitting, and Bishop clothing.

Information concerning the time, date and location of the classes may be obtained from the adult education program office at Medford High school, telephone 773-7220.
