

Tips for Removing Wine Stains Given

Berkeley, Calif. (AP)—Wine stains should be treated as fruit stains, says the University of California's home economists.

While the stain is still wet, spread a thick layer of salt over it, and leave for at least one-half hour. If a mark remains, run hot water under great pressure through the stain at a height far enough above the cloth not to harm fabric.

The last vestiges of a stain may respond to washing with a synthetic detergent or soap, the choice depending on the manufacturer's recommendation for the fabric involved. If the stain still shows, the home economists suggest using a bleach.
