Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a newspaper editor, three clergymen, a lawyer, a women's editor, and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors. (Copyright 1962—General Features Corp.)

Susan W. - Now I'm not sure his trip was 100 per cent business.
 Henry W. - The hotel made a mistake. She must believe me.

Susan W. - For many years now I've been accompanying my husband to a hotel in the Poconos where the salesmen in his line have a big annual convention. His firm used to pay our expenses. Now, however, with the tax crackdown on expense-account allowances, his employer said wives should stay home or else go at their own expense. So this year I stayed home.
 Lo and behold, a few days after his return and his report on how much he missed me, a card arrives from the hotel addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. and saying how glad they were to entertain us and hoping we'd return. He insists it's a clerical error. He says he shared the room with another salesman. But those fellows stick together, and now I'm really wondering.

Henry W. - Here's a nice how-do-you-do. That hotel was so jammed the desk people were dizzy. This proves it. It was every man for himself and you either had to double up or scatter to other lodgings. I couldn't get a single so I doubled with a fellow from Chicago.

It would be terribly embarrassing to have to contact him now, as well as the hotel, to get all this down in black and white to convince my wife. In addition, it might start something in his wife's mind, too.

Sue should trust me better than that. Believe me, if I were out to cheat I wouldn't give my right name and address, would I? And I'd stay someplace where nobody knew me. The letter she's worried about is just a form thing they send all guests automatically.

The Council: If Susan has any other inklings of Henry's adventures in dalliance, then the incriminating letter from the hotel becomes Exhibit P or Q in the array she will eventually set before her lawyer. But if she's merely bored, restless, and feeling unsure of herself, she's ballooning a trifle into an incident she may regret.

The answer here boils down (if Susan will stop boiling) to trust. A wife who trusts her husband unconditionally won't even listen to reports from the gal he was shipwrecked with on a desert isle. Call her a dope, but she knows (and keeps) her man. A wife with doubts, on the other hand, sees every nod or hello he extends to an attractive female as a code between them for a future assignment.

From Susan's story we'd say laugh the letter off and forget it. Figure out what could have happened, and probably did. The Mr. and Mrs. heading may have been in the hotel files from previous years, and the typist never bothered to check this year's registration carefully. We're reminded of a G.I. reading mail in his foxhole during the Korean war. It was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. and asked them whether they'd like a representative to call with a demonstration of an electric vibrating machine for the home. It could honestly be a clerical error, Susan.

On the other hand if suspicions assail you for other reasons, you may still want to call the hotel, check the records, and receive proof of Henry's ex-pi-a nation. But we're back to what we said above. Will it be "proof"? As Henry indicates, a man who is out to cheat covers his traces better than that. As Mrs. Ruyard Kipling might have said, "If you can keep your head . . . if you can trust your husband . . . yours is the triumph!"

Catalysts Could Be Valuable Investment

Louisville, Ky. (UPI)—Possibly the best investments in modern business are the mysterious pills called catalysts. Every dollar's worth sold leads to an average $200 or more in the end-product value, the industry estimates.

Practically every commercially useful chemical reaction today depends on catalysts to make it economically feasible, according to Chemtron corporation, a leading producer of the pellets that have the strange ability to accelerate reactions without being permanently altered themselves.
