Widowhood To Be Topic For Extension Units

"When Widowhood Comes" is the topic of the Jackson County Extension units will study during the month of February. Death strikes every family not once but many times, and too often people shy away and ignore the fact of death as much as possible, according to Miss Joan Beasley, home extension agent, who gave the material to project leaders recently.

Many of us avoid discussing this unpleasant subject for fear that it might hasten the event, the agent pointed out.

The lesson deals with reactions and adjustments to bereavement and learning to live alone.

Mrs. Roberta Frasier, family life specialist with the extension service at Oregon State university, made records for the use of the project leaders in teaching this lesson to their units.

Miss Beasley will be teaching "Wills and Estates," to several of the units this month. The lesson has been prepared with the cooperation of the Oregon State Bar association. Legal terms will be explained and there will be a discussion of different types of property, how it is owned and the effects of ownership transfer at the time of death.

Miss Beasley will give this lesson to all the units during the next four months. The units will be notified as to the month this lesson will be given for them.

Anyone interested in attending the lessons or joining an extension unit is invited to call the extension office, telephone 773-8215.

MANOR-ISMS

By ETHELYN EVANS

Our Rogue Valley Manor celebrated the second anniversary of its opening day with all the appurtenances of a big wedding anniversary. Our dining room hostesses were dressed in lovely white brocade, golden slippers and wore white corsages. Our administrator, Walter Higgins, with a huge, white carnation in his lapel was ready to make like the best man. That, of course, has been his role through the more than seven years of thinking, breathing and living "Manor."

M. N. Hogan, in the stellar role of president of the board (or bridegroom, from that wedding anniversary angle) and board members, George Flanagan, Sidney Ainsworth, Walter Garner, the Rev. George Roseberry and Dr. Elmo Stevenson, joined the festivities. Judging from their beaming faces, all these men were proud of and happy with the results of years of dedicated work.

All the tables were decorated with colorful paper "2s"; and at a central, candle-lit table sat Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Taylor, Mr. Alice Peil, Miss Mabel Hodson and Arthur Wright, members who entered the Manor on the opening day - January 30, 1961.

Our waitresses provided a jocular note to the party by wearing extremely high, shiny, black paper hats. Incidentally, a roast prime-rib dinner was "enjoyed by all," as they sometimes say in social notes.

Reports of southland frigid temperature notwithstanding, many of our members have gone that-a-way, with Tucson, Ariz., the objective. My husband and I have recently returned from Tucson. We found it another city with an exploding population. A large part of this increase has been achieved by moving the city boundaries out in all directions and annexing subdivisions and even small communities. As a result, they have been unable to catch up with themselves in paving and street signing.

Sabrino Canyon, a delightfully scenic recreation area practically within the city limits, we enjoyed and visited several times on picnics. This is a very narrow canyon between towering hills of varied colored rock or thick stands of caeti, with actually thousands of boulders forming the canyon floor.

There was a lovely, quiet little stream tip-toeing along among the rocks, but we were told that often, and with insufficient warning, it becomes a raging torrent, throwing huge boulders in all directions. This can happen during the flash-flood season. Consequently, the United States Forest Service has constructed bridges and roadbeds of solid rock.

Also, Tucson is most fortunate to have the locally famous Mt. Lemmon for a year-round playground. Less than two hours' driving time over a wonderfully scenic mountain road, which required 15 years to construct, takes one into this wonderland. In summer both residents and tourists enjoy it to escape the heat - many have summer homes in the timber and along the highway - and in winter it is a favorite spot for winter sports, good ski runs, etc. Along the winding road the distant views of exceedingly deep canyons, mountains and weird formations of rocks are well worth seeing.

The Manor devotees of fresh air and exercise refuse to be daunted by this nippy, snappy weather. Even the very early (before breakfast - yet) walks continue. They find it necessary, of course, to bundle up in heavy topcoats, scarves, gloves and even - so help me - a number of our women members go swinging alone dangling that ubiquitous handbag or purse. Anyway, it is such a good and healthful habit that all should follow along.

Eldred Peyton, chairman of the Municipal Rose Garden committee, reported that a San Francisco landscape firm is now in the process of preparing a master plan for the City of Medford, and plans for a municipal rose garden will be held in abeyance until this plan is accepted by the city.

Mrs. Axtell and Mrs. Edith Updike reported on the Consulting Rosarian meeting in Portland on December 1. It was announced that the 1963 Medford Rose show will be held on June 8. The show co-chairmen are Mrs. Ruth Boyd, Mrs. Florence Hartley and Mrs. Carl Norris.

Slides of new introductions of roses from Fred Edmunds Nursery were shown by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Miller.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Quackenbush.

Save yourself some time when you are baking muffins. Double the recipe and package enough for each breakfast in aluminum foil; store in the refrigerator or freezer for reheating just before serving.

Goldy and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Taylor - enjoyed the last meeting when Robert Ringer kept us laughing and interested. Mrs. Dick House tells me she has many Manor people on the club's waiting list for membership.
