Small Worlds Around Us By LYNN M. WATKINS. 'Sea-Pencils' Are Found on Many Beaches of the World. The pod of the mangrove tree-like, slender and hard-is a common object on many of the warmer beaches of the world.

MOO-O-OS and MUSINGS. Ruddyard Kipling said of the mangrove, 'They march down to the sea.' They do exactly that. The long aerial roots drop down from the horizontal branches in a lace-like curtain.

Little Daisy. The recurrent submersion of the aerial roots and lower trunks makes possible the growth of barnacles and oysters until, at times, the roots and trunk are completely covered with shellfish and other marine growth.
