Knights of Altar Formal Investiture Ceremonies Held

Twenty-three boys of Sacred Heart parish became members of the Knights of the Altar yesterday morning at the first formal investiture ceremonies of the organization ever to be held in the local Catholic church.

The Knights of the Altar is an international society, with headquarters at Notre Dame, Ind.

All of the boys participating in the rites are eighth grade students at St. Mary's school and have been preparing for the occasion for several months under the direction of the Rev. Gilbert Lulay.

To qualify for membership each boy was required to serve a minimum number of hours at mass and other religious services and to pass tests on his knowledge of the mass, religion, the Constitution of the United States and history of his Church and country. Advancement in rank is earned as more hours as an altar boy are served and higher degrees of tests are passed.

Attended Mass

Immediately preceding the investiture ceremonies the boys attended mass together and received holy communion. Celebrant was the Very Rev. Carl Mai, who also presided at the investiture, assisted by Father Lulay. Servers were Philip Hollen and Larry Hochstatter.

After mass the candidates went to the altar to be vested with cassock and surplice, the symbols of their position as altar boys and the purity they are to strive to preserve, and to be presented with membership certificates and pins. Then, standing at the foot of the altar, the Knights recited their pledge and promise.

Receiving the highest rank of grand knight were Daniel Stinson, Eric Jensen, Douglas Nelson, Steve Lewis, Glen Meeker, Steven Rose, Larry Hochstatter, Philip Hollen, and Michael Molyneaux.

Rank of knight commander was conferred upon five boys; rank of knight was earned by seven, and two were made pages.

Following the ceremonies the boys, Father Mai and Father Lulay were honored at a breakfast served in the school annex by several mothers and eighth grade girls.
