

Student From Malaya Is Altrusa Speaker

The Altrusa Club of Medford will hold its St. Valentine's day meeting February 14, Thursday, at 7 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Victor Peterson, 215 Willamette ave., with Mrs. Charles Kyer as cohostess.

The vocational committee, headed by Mrs. Lucine Miles and Mrs. Valton Finley, have arranged a vocational tour through the Rogue Valley Greenhouse and Florist, 925 Franquette street, with Mrs. Pauline Bright, owner and member of Altrusa as guide.

The club will then return to Mrs. Peterson's home for refreshments and a talk on the horticulture industry by Mrs. Bright.

The vocational committee plans a series of such tours during the year to educate the members regarding the varied industries, businesses, and professions represented in the club roster, which only includes executives or owners.

Officers and directors of the service club will meet Monday, February 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of the president, Mrs. Walter Young, Hillcrest-Phoenix road.

Foreign Student

The international relations committee headed by Mrs. Fred Konshot presented a foreign exchange student from Malaya at the meeting in January. Miss Nik Azizah Binti Haji Nik Yahya from Kota Bharu in Kelantan, Malaya, and Mrs. Robert Riechers, with whom the foreign student is making her home, Mrs. Eugene Sharp and Miss Martha Hanley, were guests.

Miss Yahya, who was dressed in formal Malayan costume for the occasion, talked about the history of her country, which is still ruled by a sultan and each state by a king. She explained that the country is federated under a premier and has strong ties with the British Empire.

Explaining the class system in her country and the marriage customs, Miss Yahya said the woman retains her own family name after marriage and the children use both names, including the class title which in her class is NIK, related or of the royal family.

Status of Women

Regarding the status of women in her country, Miss Yahya said there is a growing feeling among women who attend the university against the choosing by the parents of whom she is to marry. She added that among those educated, class distinctions are not as strict as formerly.

Miss Yahya described her own engagement party to which the intended bridegroom and his family brought many gifts, but at which she could not appear. She explained that her dowry must exceed these gifts, many of which were gowns and jewelry which Miss Yahya showed to the group, trying on the different costumes.

After this Miss Yahya danced a Malayan native dance, explaining that all girls learn these dances when very young, every gesture being symbolic so that the dance tells a story or poem.

Following refreshments, Miss Katherine Fonken, in whose art class at Medford High school Miss Yahya is studying, showed a colored slides of her recent trip to Thailand, which borders Malaya and which Miss Yahya has always wished to visit, but has not been allowed because of banditry along the border.

Miss Mary Hanley was co-hostess.

Who says getting personal is none of our business?

It's our business to ask you questions like these:

Q: You want bedroom lighting—is it your bedroom or do you share it?

Q: Well, then, do you use a double bed, or twins?

Q: Does either of you rise or retire earlier than the other?

Q: What color nightgown do you like most?

Q: What size is your bedroom?

Q: What style of furniture?

Q: Do you have a chaise?

Q: What color walls? Ceiling? Carpet? Draperies?

Q: Do you, or your husband, ever sleep lightly?

Does either of you read or watch television in bed?

Personal, yes. But with your answers to guide us, we can help you find the right number, size, shape, and style of lighting—by famous Lightolier, of course. We can even suggest the right placement, as well as kind, size and color of bulb. Our people are part lighting expert, part psychologist, part interior designer and part make-up artist. And they draw on all this knowledge to put your life in the best light.

Come in soon. We've got some questions just for you.

Clear Pastels And Neutrals Spring Colors

United Press International

The color palette for spring consists of subdued, clear pastels and neutrals. Pink and yellow are among the pastels. Gray and wheat are among the neutrals. Contrasting the low-keyed colors are gay nauticals — red, white and blue. These are featured in Sunday-best togs as well as in sportswear.

Emilio Pucci, of Florence, famed for slim Capri trousers and later for stretch pants, now presents sarong pants in exotic silk prints. These are South Sea inspired and made up of one softly wrapped trouser leg, the other billowing like a skirt. The sarong pants look best worn with long-sleeved, bare-midriff jackets.

Happy homecoming prints and French doll clothes head the spring fashion parade for infants. The homecoming print, by Carter, pictures baby's first possessions — his hospital bracelet, diaper pins, booties, stuffed toy, and cup and spoon. The French doll clothes group features delicate embroidered bands trimming layette items.

The A-line silhouette stays at the head of classy spring fashions for little girls. Shaped to swing out in a wide whirl, the silhouette comes in piques, seersuckers and broadcloth for nursery and school days. For parties, the A is done in daceon organza and no-iron sheers.
