Fresh Fryer Cherry Jubilee Valentine Dish

February brings with it not only a hint of spring to come, but also a regular bouquet of lesser holidays to brighten up an otherwise drab month. These occasions are perfect times to break the monotony of winter meals with something a little special. And what can be more special, this time of year, than a tender, tasty, fresh Oregon-grown fryer. The modern, year-round production of fryers now makes it possible for us to enjoy this favorite whenever we desire, and on a reasonable budget.

This time of year, it is good for us to remember that poultry meat is one of the most nutritious of all meats. Fryer meat has less fat and cholesterol and yet is significantly higher in vitamins and minerals. It is recommended particularly for growing children. And Oregon housewives can now be sure of getting the freshest and most nutritious fryers obtainable simply by looking for fryers with the Oregon label.

FRESH FRYER CHERRY JUBILEE

One Oregon fryer, cut up; one-half cup flour; one teaspoon salt; pepper; one-fourth cup melted butter; one No. 303 can red sour pitted cherries; one-half cup sugar; one tablespoon cornstarch; one-fourth teaspoon cloves; one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon; one tablespoon lemon juice; one-fourth teaspoon red food coloring; one-fourth cup brandy.

Combine flour, salt and pepper in paper bag. Add chicken in two or three pieces at a time and shake. Arrange chicken in one layer in a shallow baking pan. Drizzle one-half cup melted butter over chicken. Bake at 350 degrees 45 to 50 minutes; turn once or twice.

Blend sugar, cornstarch, cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon. Combine with the cherries; add lemon juice and food coloring. Bring to a boil and cook until slightly thickened.

When chicken is done remove from oven and place in serving dish or chafing dish. Pour cherry sauce over the chicken and serve.

To flame, place brandy in small cup and warm over hot water. Pour over chicken and light with match. (Sugar cubes dipped in lemon extract may be used in place of brandy. Place around edge of chicken.)

Mary Chinn, representative for Beauty Counselor cosmetics, will present a program following the luncheon. Her presentation will include demonstrations of cosmetic effects on two models.

Reservations are necessary, and members of the medical auxiliary who wish to attend are asked to phone Mrs. N. J. Wilson by Tuesday noon, if they are not previously contacted.

Making the trip will be Miss Gertrude Molloy, chairman of the district committee on legislation, Mrs. Helen Jane Slack, Ashland, committee member, and Mrs. Joan Boss, District 4 president.

A meeting of District 4 members is set for Tuesday, February 12 at 8 p.m., when Dr. John Welch will speak on recent developments in the treatment of asthma.

A living room bright with color and filled with gay shades of yellow, red, and green almost always suggests sociability and stimulates conversation.

Children Concerned Over World Crisis

If you have a preschool youngster, you may wonder if the present world crisis has any effect on him. School age children have been informed about what to do in an emergency, but what about the little tots?

Mrs. Roberta Frasier, Oregon State university family life specialist, says that parents can be sure that any youngster age three or older has absorbed a lot from family conversations, radio, television, his playmates and older brothers and sisters. And he's probably put his own interpretation on what he's heard. Most youngsters will integrate these concepts into their play although some may feel anxious and insecure.

Can Adjust Mrs. Frasier says that experience with children in World War II showed that children can withstand almost anything if they are with their parents. Once they know what to expect, they can adjust to it. Fear of the unknown is more emotionally damaging than the danger itself, she continues. Children get their cues for behavior from people around them.

How can parents help anxious children? 1. Observe preschoolers and older children at their play. Listen to their conversation for clues about their fears.

"Once you get these clues, talk about them and meet them head on. It doesn't do much good to deny fears or to tell children not to worry," says the specialist.

2. Plan a course of action and explain it to the youngsters. Tell them what you'll do in case of war. Let them share in storing the emergency food supply. Explain what you'll do for light. Show them the candle supply but be sure matches are out of reach.

3. Recognize that children are fearful of being separated from parents. If youngsters express or show concern about separation, reassure them that you'll be together. Explain that there will be people who would help get the family together if they get separated.
