Open House Set At Armory Sunday For Muster Day

Open house in observance of "Operation Muster 1963," the recruiting drive which has been underway across the nation since Feb. 1, will be held Sunday, Feb. 24, at the Medford Memorial National Guard Armory from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Capt. Charles E. Henry and First Lieut. Levi G. Monroe, who are directing arrangements, have emphasized that all facilities will be available to anyone wishing to join the National Guard.

There will be someone on duty throughout the day to answer questions and give advice to persons concerned about meeting their military obligations.

Public Invited

The public is invited to view the displays, arranged in consideration of the National Guard's role in civil defense as well as training in the military skills.

A special invitation is extended to the parents of youths who still have a military obligation to fulfill. Lieutenant Monroe emphasized.

The role of the Oregon National Guard in a local or national disaster was outlined here earlier this week when Maj. Charles A. Barclay, representing the adjutant general, lectured at the Armory. He pointed up the need for young men to be trained for survival, maintaining that the lack of this training has been one of the downfalls of the U.S. Army in the past.

Medford Police Arrest Men for Lane County

Medford police Wednesday arrested two men in Medford wanted by law enforcement authorities in Lane county. Arrested were Marvin Arthur Steadman, 29, of Philomath, Ore., wanted by the Eugene police department on a charge of uttering and publishing a forged check, and Donald Frank Schwab, 30, of 242 Beatty st., Medford, on a Lane county charge of failure to provide.

governor, and 196 fewer than asked by the Board of Higher Education.

Rep. John Mosser (R-Portland), proposed the cutback. The committee rejected an alternate motion by Sen. Alfred Corbett (D-Portland), for a 16.5 to 3 ratio.

Fresh Cut Eyed

A move to restrict freshman out-of-state enrollments to 10 per cent of the freshman class total was proposed by Rep. Stafford Hansell (R-Hermiston).

He termed the proposal "a budget device" to allow higher education to begin cutting down on undergraduate out-of-state students, thus leaving more room for Oregon students.

No action was taken on Hansell's suggestion. Mosser asked committee members to consider the advisability of raising out-of-state tuition fees, and encouraging out of state enrollment.

It was Mosser's contention that education is a business, and that if out-of-state students paid their own way, Oregon's higher education system would expand and produce more education and economic growth.

Hansell said the committee would have to adopt either the Mosser or Hansell view as a "policy decision" before planning new classroom and dormitory needs.

Rep. Ross Morgan (D-Gresham), co-chairman of the parent Joint Ways and Means committee, suggested the possibility of budgeting funds to individual institutions.

Corbett replied "we can't impose detailed instructions on the higher education board. Our job is to adopt policy, and let the board implement the policy."

Brown Asks Moves For Rehabilitation

Sacramento — (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown called upon the legislature today to move toward rehabilitating the four million Californians who "live precariously on the margin of our economy."

In a special message on social welfare, Brown told the lawmakers:

"We must complete the change in the emphasis in our public assistance programs from the cash dole philosophy which has ruled them since their beginning in the 1930's."

The chief executive also said the state must "seek out and correct the causes of poverty: lack of education, lack of training and lack of economic opportunity."

As a third point, he said the state must make its social welfare programs and the administration of them "sounder fiscally, more effective and more efficient."

To do this, he suggested the lawmakers:

- Amend state law to make "rehabilitation" a major objective of public assistance and give the state the right to require this in local administration of the program.
- Speed payment of aid in federally-assisted programs so they will be made as soon as need and apparent eligibility are established.
- Declare the administration of public welfare to be a matter of statewide concern.
- Adopt a single formula to share costs of all federally-aided welfare programs between the state and counties.
- Change the function of the state social welfare board from a policy-making unit to an advisory commission to "serve as the conscience of the people of California."

Plea by 18 Republicans for Special Tax Election Fails To Impress Barton

By ZAN STARK
United Press International
Salem — (UPI) — Speaker Clarence Barton said today he was unimpressed by a plea from 18 House Republicans for a special tax election.

Barton noted the Republicans' statement supported "the philosophy of fair taxation."

"If the legislature does a conscientious job and comes up with a fair and equitable tax law, no special election will be necessary," Barton said.

A charge last week by Rogers that the Democratic leadership was dragging its feet on tax proposals drew a sharp rebuttal from Barton.

In noting the 18 Republican representatives who signed Wednesday's statement, Barton commented "I'm more impressed by the names that are not on the list."

House Tax Committee member Victor Atiyeh (R - Portland), who sponsored Gov. Mark Hatfield's net receipts tax reform proposal, did not sign the statement.

Barton noted "there's no great clamor in the House for a special tax election. These 18 represent a small minority of the House's 60 members. "The governor told me some time ago he was not adamant on the need for a special tax election," Barton added.
