

Funeral Services Set Wednesday for Oregon Educator

In 1910 after teaching eight months at Cecil for $90 a month, he accepted the position of rural school supervisor in Douglas county. There were 35 schools included in his area and he covered them by foot, horseback and boat.

He always recalled the period as "a wonderful experience in growing up." The growing up made him realize his need for more education and he entered the University of Oregon in 1914.

His early enthusiasm for law became subordinated by his growing interest in education and after two years at the university he took a leave and returned to Monmouth for two reasons. He wanted to obtain an elementary school certificate and to study under J. H. Ackerman and Thomas H. Gentile, who had brought some theories in German education into Oregon.

Receives Degree

In 1916 he received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Oregon and returned to the teaching field as principal of Monmouth High school. He left Monmouth to enter the Army for service in World War I. Honorably discharged in 1919 he moved to Central Point, his first Jackson county assignment.

He was superintendent of the Central Point schools for three years. Accepting a cut in salary, he went to Heppner in the fall of 1922, feeling that he should widen his experience before settling down to one system for more than three years. Those were years, he often remarked, when a superintendent had to be "on his toes" and that often involved moving. In 1932 he married Helen Norcross, a Central Point girl.

He attended 10 summer sessions at the University of Oregon but made no effort to obtain a higher degree as there was at that time no premium placed on degrees.

Moves to Medford

In 1929, however, he received his master's degree from the university, four years after coming to Medford to replace Aubrey Smith as superintendent of schools. In the field of professional activities, he served for a number of years on the board of trustees of the Oregon Education association and was on the Oregon Textbook commission from 1932 to 1940. In 1937 he was one of two Oregon educators invited to make a survey of the Sacramento, Calif. schools.

He was president of the Oregon Superintendents association in 1940, but throughout the years of his superintendency made his influence felt for the most part without holding office.

Following his retirement from the schools in 1955 he was busy in his avocation, the building game, until illness forced his complete retirement.

Survivors Noted

Surviving are his wife, Helen Hedrick, three daughters and a son, Mrs. Sam Richardson, of Medford; Mrs. Robert Work and Mrs. Floyd Norton, both of Eagle Point, and William Hedrick of Winston. Mr. and Mrs. Work, Norton and William Hedrick are all members of the teaching profession.

Also surviving are a brother, Ray N. Hedrick, of Drain, and a sister, Mrs. E. S. Rickard of Sacramento. Funeral services, under the direction of Perl Funeral home, will be held in the First Presbyterian church at 10 a.m. Wednesday with Dr. D. Kirkland West officiating.

Proxmire Says History Disproves Theorists

Washington — (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) said today that history disproved the theorists who argue that large federal deficits contribute to economic growth.

"From 1957 to date," Proxmire said in a statement, "federal deficits have averaged a heavy $6 billion per year. And yet, economic growth has been a slow-moving despair of current economists during this very period."
