People Can Find Rewards in Service To Patients, Aged

Nearly every person whether young, old or handicapped can find an opportunity for a satisfying and rewarding experience in service to patients in nursing homes and homes for the aged.

Volunteer programs often offer the key to prevent this increased dependence, and the board of health has assigned Mrs. Pragruff to encourage and help organize volunteer groups to supply many needed services.

Nursing homes and homes for the aged are a relatively new concept in the care of the elderly, and originally it was felt that furnishing room, board and nursing service was all that was necessary.

Object of the volunteer program, she summarized, is to help each person find some moments of happiness, an interest in life, a belief that someone cares, help him feel he is not forgotten and to prevent unhappiness.
