Soviets Launch New Harassment Campaign With Fleet Flyovers

Washington — (UPI) — The Soviet Union appeared today to be on a new harassment campaign with huge Red air force turboprop planes buzzing American aircraft carriers far out in the Atlantic and Pacific.
 After a lengthy silence, Washington now has revealed how reconnaissance versions of the Russian Bear bomber are dispatched on over-water flights of several thousand miles to ferret out American fleet units.
 Previously the Soviets confined themselves to scouting U.S. ships that were within a few hundred miles of shore and could be reached by comparatively short-range aircraft of the twin jet Badger bomber type.
 Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara disclosed details at a news conference Thursday of Russian flights over U.S. carriers from Jan. 27 to Feb. 22. They occurred in both oceans and represented "a rather substantial addition" to previous Red aerial inspection activities, he said. They showed no "hostile intent."
No U.S. Reconnaissance
 McNamara said there had been no Soviet air reconnaissance of North America. But the performance of the four Bear aircraft last Friday demonstrated, as experts already knew, that the turboprop planes in service since 1954 have ample range to scout these shores.
 On that occasion, four Bears flew over the 59,000 ton carrier Forrestal southeast of the Azores as it steamed homeward from a tour with the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean. They flew in pairs, separated by a two hour interval. Each time, one plane stayed at 30,000 feet while the other swooped under a 2,000 foot overcast to inspect the flattop.
 McNamara's report indicated that the Bears must have flown a roundtrip of more than 7,000 nautical miles.
 He told how U.S. Air Force F102 jet interceptors went aloft from Iceland to follow the four-engined planes. That indicated the Bears flew south from Soviet Arctic bases and may have been detected by radar in northern Norway as well as Iceland.
 The Forrestal launched F4B Phantom jets to trail the first two Bears northward for 150 miles. Then the F102s took over again. Phantoms "escorted" the second flight while over the Forrestal.
 Although Russia has often protested American over-flights of Soviet ships on the high seas, McNamara said the Bears had a "legal right" to be in the air over international waters.
Cites Other Flights
 He said other flights were made over the nuclear powered carrier Enterprise in the North Atlantic Feb. 12 and 13, the Kitty Hawk in the North Pacific between Jan. 27 and Feb. 3, and the Princeton in the North Pacific between Feb. 13 and 16.

Stocks Level Out, Begin New Rally; Blue Chips Rise

New York — (UPI) — Stocks leveled out and began to rally today.
 Apparently a groundswell of good business and economic news over the past few days turned the tide and brought buyers out of hiding after a market correction of 25 points in the past seven sessions.
 The first blue chips to develop big gains on the comeback were Du Pont and Chrysler. Many other heavyweights inched forward fractions. Small gains also predominated in the general list.

Former Opera Star Likes Home Nudity
 New York — (UPI) — Mimi Benzell, former star of the Metropolitan Opera, spoke out Thursday for a natural attitude toward nudity in the home.
 Miss Benzell, married and the mother of two young children, said, "If you can't take your clothes off in the family circle, where can you do it?" Her remarks were made while taping a television show "Girl Talk," ABC to be broadcast today.
 "We've always had a close family relationship — very casual — and we have never felt it was wrong to walk around unclothed," she said. "My husband and I never cover up when our children walk into our room. And the children have never felt it was immodest to be nude."

Hanby Student Wins Gold Key Award
 Gold Hill — Eileen Kell, eighth grade student at Hanby Elementary school, received first place or gold key award with blue ribbon label, and an honorable mention award at the Regional Scholastic Art exhibit at J. K. Gill company in Portland this year.
 The blue ribbon label qualifies her piece of art work to be sent to the National Scholastic Art Exhibit May 6 through 24 in New York City.
 The Gold Key award with blue ribbon was given Eileen for her entry of a landscape in tempera paints. It was a sketch of a scene at Tou Velle State park. The honorable mention award was entitled Mt. Calvary of the Three crosses. Eileen's art work was entered by her art instructor, Mrs. Mildred Black, Hanby teacher.
 There were 4,000 entries. Entries were from many schools throughout the state of Oregon. Only 200 students were awarded gold keys and 100 blue ribbons. The Gold Hill student is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kell, Fourth ave., in Gold Hill.

Portland Bureau Supports Closing

Portland — (UPI) — The Portland Retail Trade Bureau supports a proposed bill in the Oregon Legislature for a tough Sunday closing law, its president said Thursday night.
 Mario Bisio said the bureau's board of directors voted to endorse the measure.
 "This measure has the support of nearly all of the members of our retail community, including some of the discount houses," he said. "Most of the retailers in this area don't want to remain open on Sunday but they feel that if something isn't done by this legislature to bring about Sunday closing then we will all soon be opening our doors seven days a week."

Vandenberg's Son Ditches Plane

La Grange, N.C. — (UPI) — Maj. Hoyt S. Vandenberg Jr., son of the former Air Force chief of staff, parachuted to safety near here Thursday shortly before his crippled jet fighter exploded in flight.
 Vandenberg, 34, married and the father of two, was on a routine flight out of Seymour Johnson Air Force base at Goldsboro when the aircraft developed trouble.
 He guided the plane away from populated areas with the aid of base radar before ditching. Flaming wreckage from the plane fell into a wooded area about 200 yards from the nearest residence.

Cocktail Waitress Bill Killed by House Group

Salem — (UPI) — A bill that has barmaids and cocktail waitresses up in arms was killed Thursday by the House Committee on Labor and Industries.
 Its sponsor, Rep. Edward Whelan (D-Portland) voted with five other committee members to table it.
 Whelan said he was concerned over reports that attorneys were soliciting cocktail waitresses for fees to fight the bill.
 The bill would have prevented women from working in bars. Whelan said, however, he had no intention of doing this, but only wanted to point up cases where cocktail waitresses were required to work behind bars without getting bartender's pay.

Do Pass
 The Senate State and Federal Affairs committee gave a "do pass" recommendation to a measure calling for elimination of liquor purchase permits.
 The committee also approved memorials to urge the federal government to provide funds for an anti-water pollution program at Oregon State University and to stay out of the legislative appointment field.
 The committee strode into State Game commission territory by approving two measures for a study of the commission and a third to make the game commission subject to the fish commission in anadromous fish research.
 The House Natural Resources committee heard protests to a proposed natural resources department from the State Forestry department, which would be incorporated in the new agency.
 The Senate Committee on Labor and Industries, with two alternative workmen's compensation bills finally before it, continued taking testimony on the subject that sparked so much heat in 1961.
Accepted by Labor
 One is the governor's bill, considered a compromise and tentatively accepted by labor. The other is management's bill to give private insurance firms a large share of the industrial accident insurance business, now a state monopoly.
 Other highlights:
Lumber—The first hearing of a senate joint memorial to congress urging that railroads be encouraged to provide "free hold" time for timber shipments was held Thursday, and continued to a second hearing to be scheduled later.
 A railroad spokesman said present law prevents railroads from providing free hold time unless a charge is levied.
Education—A Ways and Means Subcommittee continued a page-by-page review of Department of Education budget requests, with Supt. of Public Instruction Leon Minear explaining budget requests to committee members.

Salem — (UPI) — Purchase of 45 electric typewriters by the legislature was termed an economy move Thursday by House Speaker Clarence Barton.
 The machines, which cost $19,206, are for use of senators' and representatives' secretaries during the session, and will be transferred to other state agencies when the session ends.
 There were reports that several Republican legislators were going to protest the purchase.
 Barton said he, Senate President Ben Musa, and Gov. Mark Hatfield signed the order for the IBM machines, which cost about $414 each.
 Barton said the Department of Finance advised against purchase of less expensive machines. IBM's are used by state agencies because lower maintenance costs more than make up for the higher purchase price, Barton said he was advised by the finance department.
 Barton said state agencies purchase about 142 of the machines each year, and that the finance department has announced it will transfer the typewriters to other departments when the session ends and credit the legislature's account.
 Barton said the purchase was made when the finance department advised it would cost $11 a month to buy a machine, and more than $20 a month to rent it.
