Phillip Hanson, widely known actor, will present a one-man program, "My Name is Aram" for a dinner meeting of Rogue Valley Knife and Fork club Tuesday, March 5, at Rogue Valley Country club. The program is based on a collection of short stories by William Saroyan about an Armenian-American boy growing up in California's San Joaquin valley. Mr. Hanson for many years has played leading roles and directed for both the Oregon and San Diego Shakespearean festivals, has appeared in several eastern cities, including New York, with his "Moby Dick" and Shakespearean programs, and earlier this winter toured Canada for six weeks. Most recently he presented two programs for Sacramento State college. Members are to make reservations with the secretary, Mrs. Richard House, 15 Corning court, no later than Saturday, March 2.

Orchestra San Pietro Praised by Reviewer

By RICHARD D. WEINER

As the poet said, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and how true indeed! And someone else said, "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." And we say beauty is in the ear of the listener also.

For those fortunate enough to have heard the orchestra San Pietro of Naples under the direction of Renato Rucolo in Grants Pass Wednesday evening, the above is certainly true.

This orchestra is an aggregation of artists and each a virtuoso on his chosen instrument including the conductor, who is also a violinist.

To attempt to enumerate all the fine qualities of all the players would perhaps be boring inasmuch as the same high praise is apropos for each one. Suffice to say that there were outstanding moments during the program, particularly the oboe soloists, the contrabass soloist and way in the back unseen, the first French horn player.

This young man, Giuseppe Ferreri, executed a passage twice in succession in which he had to reach one of the highest notes on the instrument, literally picking it out of the air. This is real virtuosity. And during the sustained passages the quality of tone by both players had the lovely sheen of royal purple.

The oboists were pure delight. Superb technicians in very difficult music, the quality of their tone is the kind seldom heard in this country. The French style is toward the plaintive-bordering on the thin side and leaves no scope for expression. The German style leans toward the meaty, approaching thickness (fat). This is good for bands.

The Italian style is the true one inasmuch as it follows the pastoral idea. This is a warm expressive tone and never becomes tiring and this is the tone the treatises talk about when they say the oboe can be heard through the whole orchestra.

Of course the featured soloist, Gianni Amadio, contrabass, received an ovation. This young man, just turned 20, played the bass as if it were a cello. And appropriately enough he played a Tarantella by the great bassist of the nineteenth century, Botticini. Although a technically difficult piece which Amadio overcame easily, it was the warmth and quality of his tone that was outstanding. Even under humid atmospheric conditions he performed extreme tones in the upper harmonics, which demanded that he play far beyond the fingerboard. An excellent display of virtuosity.

All the music on the program was limited to the Rococo and Baroque styles (1650-1850) mainly because the orchestra is mostly strings. But it was all beautiful music of a simple harmonic texture, (even the symphony by Haydn), and many rhythms. Herein lies the principal charm of the music, the great variety of meter and rhythms. And that we may add is the essence of any art.

However, we are of the opinion that the orchestra San Pietro of Naples can play any style music equally well. These people, all younger than 30 years, are dedicated to their art, music is their life and they are glad of it. It is a rich life, rich in association with kindred spirits, in communion with great creators, in the constant striving for perfection and beautiful memories of things beautiful to hear.

The clothes we wear, the food we eat, our earthly possessions all go there with and dust and dirt corrupt but the beauty of thoughts in any form and, especially music, last for ever. And the musician has the advantage in that he is also a recorder which makes all the hours of practicing fade into the background.

The orchestra played in Medford for the 1961-62 season of Jackson County Civic Music association.

Guests—Ashland—Visitors over the Washington's birthday week end at the home of Mrs. Frances Worth, 285 Granite street, were her grandson and family, Mr and Mrs. Alan Worth and children Frances, Matthew and Christopher, Redwood City, Calif.

Twirlers Expect Club Invasion

Medford Twirlers expect a mass invasion of Cross Trailers when the club holds a square dance Saturday, March 2, at the Pythian hall, Fifth and Grape streets.

Last Saturday night the Twirlers invaded the Cross Trailers hall at Merlin and retrieved the fancy black and white shirt of their caller, Arthur Shoemaker, and Sheriff George Schmidt's badge which had been captured at the Twirlers' dance. These articles had been taken in lieu of the Twirler banner which had been carried away by the Twirlers' Teens at a previous dance.

George Ray, Twirler president, announces that the Monday night classes will become workshops, beginning Monday, March 4. Basic round dancing will be taught by Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt, and square dancing will be instructed by Mr. Shoemaker.

Just Leave Woman Alone Says Noted Sociologist

By GAY PAULEY

UPI Women's Editor
New York—(UPI)—Millions of words are written, hundreds of seminars held trying to determine what makes a woman tick.

The experts speculate on her dress, creativity, emotions, political savvy, wealth, intelligence, sense of humor, emotions, her role in the labor force, her job as housewife, wife and mother.

A prominent New York sociologist today flashed a warning light.

"Woman right now is ready to be left alone," said Dr. Ruth Farkas. "The men have allowed the women to get where they are. The women are ready to blow up."

She indicated the explosion might be in the form of feminine rebellion against so many activities to take her out of the home, or at least have removed the emphasis on her being a good housewife.

"No man brags about his wife's cooking these days," said Mrs. Farkas. "Even women have become fearful of bragging... cooking's not the thing to do now."

"It's what you're doing as a volunteer, or professional."

Mrs. Farkas, formerly of the faculty at New York university, said modern woman also can blame herself in part for getting in this dilemma.

World War II started lifting her out of the home more than ever before and she became used to the "communal" life, she said.

"This is good if proportioned properly," she said. "But the thing to keep track of is—home comes first."

"Housewife First"

Mrs. Farkas shaped us in some ways as one of the modern women busy with a multitude of activities of whom she talked. "But I'm a housewife first... and a good cook," she added.

She is the wife of George Farkas, founder and chairman of the board of Alexander's department store chain. The couple has four sons—two of them in the family business—and four grandsons.

A New Yorker born, Ruth Farkas holds a bachelor's degree in languages and the behavioral sciences at NYU, a master's from Columbia university, and a doctorate in sociology from NYU. She was on the NYU faculty until three years ago and still is on the dean's advisory board.

He added that 50 per cent of Bolivia's people are full blood Indians; some 15 per cent are white and the remaining 35 per cent are Cholos, or mixtures of the two.

In a real sense, they live in the eighteenth century, he states. It is an under-developed country, and he added, with 85 per cent illiterate, and half the children die before six years of age.

Tin Exhausted
When the mining of tin became exhausted, 50,000 miners and their families were without work.

Dr. Graham says the requirements of the university are very low. Even so, out of every 100 students who enter the university, only ten graduate.

In most of the cities are fairs, the Indians' form of relaxation.

Dr. Graham's daughter married a Bolivian, while they were there. They now live in Portland, Ore., where he is an accountant.

Mrs. Carl W. Peterson, president, conducted a business session. She introduced Mrs. William R. Marmas, president of first district, who spoke to the club on federation.

She announced the first district convention would be April 3 in Talent, with the Talent Federated Women's club as hostess group.

Mrs. Peterson appointed Mrs. Chester Wright chairman for a rummage sale to be held in the Fehi Building, Thursday, March 21, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The president introduced Mrs. Clay M. Lee, junior past district president and state chairman of projects; Mrs. Roy Nye, state department chairman of international affairs; Mrs. Ralph O. Chapin, state chairman of citizenship and first vice president of first district; Mrs. Edwin C. Hoffman, chairman of international affairs for first district; and Mrs. Jason C. Ottinger, parliamentarian of first district.

Mrs. Nye gave a report on Cuba for international affairs committee.

Mrs. Edward C. Root, corresponding secretary of the study club, read a commendation from the health committee of the Rogue Valley Council on Aging to the study club, for their outstanding work at the Medford Convalescence home.

The tea table was centered with an arrangement of violets and flowering quince. Mrs. Nye and Mrs. Lee poured.

Hostesses were Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Willis T. Fasal. Guests were Mrs. Harms, Mrs. Chapin, Grants Pass; Mrs. Thomas Lowe and Mrs. Esther Coleman.

Observances Conducted By Rogue River Groups
Rogue River—Representatives of service clubs, veterans groups and auxiliaries and other organizations participated in the observance of George Washington's birthday during a meeting of the Rogue River Civic Improvement club last week in the organization's club house.

The program was arranged by Mrs. E. B. Burkett. Mrs. Robert Rowilson, president, presided.

Li. Commander Leo E. Orvis (USN retired) spoke on patriotism and observed that we might all emulate the loyalty and devotion to our nation of Washington and Lincoln, whose love of country and faith in God helped them through each national crisis.

He also quoted from teachings of Karl Marx and pointed out how we might help to stop the progress of communism by taking a more active part in our national affairs.

Mrs. Edith Osborne recited Washington's prayer at Valley Forge and Mrs. O. Benefield read the preamble to the Constitution. Copies of the Bill of Rights and the Constitution were presented to the club by Mrs. Beryl Ingle and Mrs. Benefield.

Richard W. Hargitt, who has been associated with the Boy Scout movement in the area for nearly 20 years, reviewed work of the group. He assisted in organizing a troop in Rogue River in the early 1940's, and he named Walter Dennis and Kenneth Toner, teachers in the school, as two of those who helped in the work.

Mrs. Glen Hutchinson, Veterans Administration Volunteer service chairman for the auxiliary to World War I barracks at Rogue River, recounted activities of the auxiliary in helping rehabilitate veterans now living in the Veterans Domiciliary at White City.

Mrs. Harry Skevington represented the auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars for which she is junior vice president. She spoke on work of the organization on local and national levels, stating one of the aims of the auxiliary and post is to participate in community activities. A national program to assist disabled veterans and a home in Eaton Rapids, Mich., for children of veteran members are other projects.
