Store Displays

Oil Painting
An oil painting, "The Forest Fire," by Mrs. Joanna Enkins, 5763 Table Rock road, is being exhibited at Weisfield's Inc. at the Medford Shopping Center. The canvas is three by four feet and will be exhibited for two weeks.

Rebecca Circle Plans Meeting
Talent - The Rebecca circle of Talent Methodist church will meet Thursday, March 7 at 10:30 a.m. at the home of Mrs. George Conner, Talent. A luncheon and meeting will be held.

March 15 Is Closing Date for Gallery Show

The Halverson collection will remain at Rogue gallery, 220 West Main street, through Friday, March 15, according to Ben Trowbridge Jr., exhibit chairman for Rogue Valley Art Association. The gallery is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 12 noon until 4 p.m. and no charge is made to view the exhibit.

Lloyd Halverson, owner of the collection, spoke for a group of association members last week. The young man, who has been collecting for only a relatively short time, said he began because "I simply wanted to collect, so I did. Collecting works of art (he is little interested in contemporary art) will remain my passion until I die."

Began With One

The art lover said he began with one painting and then added others when opportunity and money afforded. He trades and bargains with dealers and other collectors. He advised those who want to start an art collection to take advantage of trends - if interest is low in one painter or type of art, buy those not in vogue since they usually are less costly.

Mr. Halverson says his tastes are catholic and that he "takes whatever is available." He believes that this is a good practice for the collector with limited funds and the beginning collector. He pointed out that it is difficult and costly to collect in one area - say the French impressionists - since this narrows the field and opportunities. In addition to oils, drawings, etc., Mr. Halverson collects antique furniture, silver and china, wood carvings, miniatures, medallions, etc.

He displayed a number of these, including a small pottery rooster and a blue and white plate which date back to the Ming dynasty in China. The speaker pointed out that those living in this area have an opportunity to collect works by Pacific Northwest painters. These contemporary artists have been capturing the attention of critics and others in all parts of the nation.

He described how he had acquired some of his paintings - he owns a Van Dyke, a Goya and a Romney, works by Modigliani, Turner, Poussin, Degas and others. One large, valuable work he acquired by trading, offering the dealer 14 smaller paintings, several pieces of antique furniture and an assortment of old silver as well as some cash.

The collector said he had acquired his knowledge of art by reading, widely and incessantly, and by conversations with critics, experts and dealers. He supplied some information about the manner in which experts authenticate a painting, saying they judge by detail, testing of such things as the varnish for age, examination of markings, lettering and seals, etc. Works by Goya, for instance, can be authenticated partly by the fact that it was his custom to begin a work by putting a layer of gold leaf paint on the canvas.

Mr. Halverson is also speaking for other groups during gallery tours.

The collector was introduced by Mr. Trowbridge, who said that it is virtually impossible for a gallery as small as Rogue gallery to have the opportunity to display such a collection. He expressed the gratitude of the association for Mr. Halverson's generosity.

Airman, Cathedral Discussed

Ashland - "A Thousand Springs" by Anna Chan Chennault is the autobiographical account by the famous airman's Chinese wife. This was the book reviewed Monday afternoon for Ashland Study club by Mrs. Ruth Dewes.

Claire Lee Chennault, American general who in 1941, organized the American Volunteer Group in China, better known as the Flying Tigers, had ever been a stormy petrel and a constant goad to the U.S. military from his earliest service in World War I.

His advanced ideas on intercepting warning and his conflict with Gen. "Vinegar" Joe Stillwell during the China-Burma-India war resulted in his resignation and an invitation from General Chiang Kai-shek to set up a Chinese warning system and to inspect Chinese troops.

The love of the middle aged American flyer and the young Chinese woman journalist is told less in words than in implication as Anna follows their brief 11 years of marriage until his death.

Mrs. Chennault writes that the General saw the Communist conspiracy when others were blind and foresaw the Korean war and the takeover of Asia following the fall of China. He knew bitter frustration during the last years of his life together with untold happiness with his wife and two daughters. Posthumous recognition has been given to Claire Chennault both in China and the United States.

National Cathedral

Mrs. Ralph Burgess presented a half-hour talk on the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., showing numerous colored pictures of the church which has been in process of construction for more than 60 years and which may not be completed for another half century. She described the beauty of its stained glass windows, carved altars and statues, delicately designed chandeliers and vaulted ceilings.

The National Cathedral was chartered by Congress in 1907 as an interdenominational church and is said to be the purest example of Gothic architecture in this country. The main sanctuary has a seating capacity of 3,000, while there are seven smaller chapels including one in miniature for children. In the crypts are entombed such famous Americans as Admiral Dewey, Woodrow Wilson and John Foster Dulles.

On Mt. St. Alban, a hillside overlooking the Potomac and the nation's capitol the cathedral, also known as St. Peter and St. Paul and the seat of the Protestant Episcopal diocese, belongs not only to the nation but to the world.

Hostess for the meeting was Mrs. N. H. Dillon, 847 Garden Way. In the absence of the president, Mrs. R. D. Lamb, the program chairman, Mrs. Faith McCullough, presided.

Derby Family Returns Home

Derby - Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Haworth and daughter Ronda returned recently to their home at Box 166, Butte Falls highway, Eagle Point, after spending several days with relatives in California.

In Carmichael, they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Unden, brother-in-law and sister of Mr. Haworth.

During their visit in Placerville, at the home of Mr. Haworth's brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Don Haworth, they attended a family dinner in honor of Mr. Haworth's mother, Mrs. R. C. Haworth on the occasion of her 80th birthday. Mrs. Haworth lived in Butte Falls and the Derby area for several years, and is now making her home in Sacramento.

Fire Protection Advice Listed by Association

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York - (UPI) - The tragic headlines tell the story: Family of 10 dies in fire in home at Morehouse, Mo. In Quebec: Seven children die when fire destroys duplex frame dwelling. In Panama City, Fla.: Two children and stepfather die in home fire.

Two persons die; three burned severely in frame house fire in Memphis, Tenn. Two killed in fire in Norwalk, Conn., home.

So the news went last weekend, has gone on all winter, goes on each winter. The National Fire Protection association, Boston, said its studies indicate that 50 or more per cent of dwelling fire deaths occur in the cold weather months November through February.

The number one reason for the fires: Defective, misused heating equipment.

What can you do to make your home and family fire-safe?

NEPA suggested a Q & A test on some of the ordinary hazards. "Every 'no' answer is an invitation for fire to invade your home," said NEPA, which pointed out that home fires number close to 800 each day in the United States.

Consider the heating and cooking departments.

-Are furnaces, stoves and smokepipes far enough away from combustible walls and ceilings, and in good repair? Is your heating equipment checked annually by a serviceman?

-If you have portable room heaters in your home, do you see that they are properly maintained and located?

-do you make sure there are no clothes, curtains or furniture near any stove, heater or fireplace in the house? Is a screen in front of the fireplace when it is in use? Are coal and wood ashes kept in covered metal containers away from anything that might catch fire?

Should Check Chimneys
-Do you have the chimney cleaned and checked regularly to insure against chimney fires?

-For safety against chimney and other sparks, is your roof covering fire retardant?

In the matter of electricity:
-Do you see that extension cords are never run under rugs or hooked over nails?

-Is the right size fuse, 15 amps for lighting circuits, in each socket in the fuse box? Do you use a new fuse-never substitute - after each short circuit?

-Are your refrigerator and other appliance motors cleaned regularly?

-Is your television antenna installed where it cannot fall across power lines? Is it equipped with a properly grounded arrester?

On good housekeeping:
-Do you keep rubbish cleaned out of the attic, basement, closets, garage, and yard?

-Is paint kept in tightly closed metal containers?

Storage of Liquids
-Are gasoline and other flammable liquids stored in safety cans and kept well away from both heat and children?

-Have you made it a rule never to use flammable liquids like gasoline or kerosene for cleaning clothes or starting fires?

If there's a smoker in the family:
-Is smoking in bed strictly against the rule in your home?

-Are you careful how you dispose of cigarettes, cigar and pipe ashes? Are there plenty of large ashtrays throughout the house?

-Are matches kept out of the reach of the children?

Three-fourths of all fires are the result of carelessness, says the National Board of Fire Underwriters. But in case of fire, follow two rules. One, get everybody out of the house. Two, call the fire department.
