

Firemen Seek Part Of Cigarette Tax

Salem—Firemen called for a fraction of a cigarette tax here Tuesday night to help pay for fighting cigarette-caused fires. Two members of the house tax committee, in response, rebuked the firemen's chief spokesman, Harold Jacobson of Multnomah county, who spoke for the Oregon Fire Chiefs, Volunteer Firemen's, and Rural Fire Protection Districts association. Jacobson said if a cigarette tax was levied, firemen want one-fifth of a penny of it for training center strengthening the state fire marshal's office, and setting up a fund for relatives of firemen killed in action. The sum would amount to $900,000 a biennium. WILL APPEAL Salem—The State Tax Commission said Wednesday it will appeal a tax decision involving Harvey Alcumison company to the Oregon Supreme Court.

Feeding the Family

Splendor of Spring Fills Food Baskets No one can be expected to speak of such mundane things as best buys in beans and hamburger when local markets proclaim gaily that Spring is here. And in the Spring, our fancy turns to festive meals featuring new fashions in food as nature produces early samples that hint of the abundance to come. Spring comes to our area at 20 minutes past midnight (3:20 a.m. EST according to the almanac), Thursday, March 21. The vernal equinox as you know occurs when the sun's center crosses the equator and day and night are everywhere of equal length. So today we throw budgetary discretion to the winds wafting past the window and revel in new arrivals in the market places. There are tender new green peas for the shelling and well worth the effort. New round red potatoes, tubers for cooking in their thin skins and for cobbing with those newly shelled peas or for buttering and rolling in finely chopped parsley. Asparagus and artichokes showed up earlier but belong on Spring menus more often as cost comes down. Supplies were never handomer. Snowy cauliflower, broccoli and magic mushrooms speak of spring. Rhubarb, the vegetable that behaves like a fruit is in excellent supply. Green onions and rosy radishes taste a little sweeter. We've sighted corn on the cob and there are a few quite expensive strawberries but they never taste better than when new and expensive. Marinated Sardines and Artichokes Go Fines Seasonal Go-Fines The new crop of sardines for which Maine is famous is jamb-packed into cans which are still displayed in markets as a Lenten treat. The fish are small and firm, nutritious, and delicious when bargain priced. We team them with new season artichokes which never looked better in the produce bins than right now. Sardines in Marinade Drain 2 or more 4-ounce cans Maine sardines; sprinkle in shallow dish. Spread with 6 whole cloves and bit of bay leaf. Make marinade by combining 3/4 cup salad oil or olive oil, 3/4 cup lemon juice or mild vinegar, 1 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, 2 teaspoon Tabasco, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 2 tablespoons water. Spoon marinade over sardines; chill. Drain and arrange on plate with lemon wedges for "squeezing over". Use up marinade for more sardines, for dressing up artichokes or picnitos or hard-cooked eggs or a vegetable medley. Artichoke Cookery Trim artichokes; stand upright in pan just big enough to hold artichokes snugly. Add water to cover, 1 minced garlic clove, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and 1 tablespoon salad oil. Cover and boil gently until leaf can be pulled easily from stalk or stem can be easily pierced with a fork; a matter of 25 to 40 minutes dependent on size of artichokes. Remove immediately from water; drain upside down. Serve whole or halved with "chokes" removed; with marinade leftover from sardines, with hot melted butter, lemon butter, mayonnaise or easy Hollandaise in separate small dish for artichoke leaf dipping. Picnitos Pimientos are fine accompaniment for sardines and all other fish. Select whole bright red picnitos from canned product, reserving ragged ones for use later in salad or sauce. Drain picnitos and serve plain or with marinade. Mustard Dip Favored for accompanying any sardine cold plate arrangement. To cup mayonnaise, add 2 tablespoons prepared mustard, dash of salt and pepper; blend in 4 tablespoons dairy sour cream to give nice consistency. New Potatoes and New Green Peas Herald Spring First of the season new potatoes are the round reds with the thin skins that are gently scraped off if you insist, though many enjoy them cooked in their skins. If the potatoes are larger than good sized walnuts, you may want to cut them in half or in quarters with they're to be combined with new green peas. For each 4 servings. Scrape 1 pound new potatoes and shell 2 pounds fresh peas (you'll get about 1 1/2 cups). Combine potatoes and peas with 1 tablespoon finely sliced green onion in a saucepan; add 1 cup boiling water, 1/2 teaspoon salt. Cover and cook 15 or 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add 1/4 cup evaporated milk or cream and 2 tablespoons butter and simmer very gently until liquid is somewhat thickened. Many good cooks like to fold the potatoes and peas into a nicely seasoned white sauce using the liquid in which the vegetables are cooked. For a bit of color, add 2 thinly sliced radishes just before serving. Fresh Green Peas First green peas of the season are a treat well worth the work. Most peas now go into cans and frozen food packages which are in super abundance the year around. Let's recall however the tender sweetness of new peas dropped into boiling salted water and cooked only 15 minutes, perhaps with a dash of onion salt or cooked with a small onion, then seasoned simply with butter, salt and pepper. Or pair new peas with small cooked onions, with freshly sauteed mushrooms, with dried cooked celery or with the smallest of the new potatoes. Chop p e d parsley and mint are flavor complements long enjoyed with peas. Mint by all means if lamb is served. Magic Mushrooms For Magic Moments Magic moments of eating magic mushrooms. The Pharaohs of Egypt monopolized mushrooms for their own use. Feeling they were much too magic to be eaten by common folk. Mushrooms now are cultivated in tremendous quantities in our part of the country; are picked, packed and rushed daily to local markets for enjoying at very modest cost. A mushroom grower of our acquaintance has cooked them like this for 20 years. That seems a good enough recommendation. Butter a deep pan, cut up or slice freshly laundered, unpeeled mushrooms so they fill the pan to a depth of about 2 inches. Simmer over low heat until mushrooms are covered with their own juice; takes about 10 minutes. Then cook more briskly for about 5 minutes—no longer. Add salt and pepper to taste. If cooking is done by other means over higher heat, cook only about 8 minutes. Overcooking toughens this fragile vegetable that grows so magically. Asparagus Oriental Fresh asparagus has been around long enough that you may be looking for a new way with it. Soy sauce gives it an Oriental savor that will be favored by many. For 6 servings, wash 2 pounds asparagus, break off each stalk wherever it snaps easily. Cut into inch long pieces and saute in 2 tablespoons cooking oil along with 1 clove of garlic. Add 4 cup chicken stock or consommé (thickened cubes or canned) and cook covered for 10 minutes. Combine 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 tablespoon cold
