Telstar Subject of Rotary Luncheon

"Behind the Scenes with Telstar" was the subject of a moving picture presented Tuesday before the Medford Rotary club by Jack Creager, local manager for Pacific Northwest Bell. The documentary film was shown at the Rogue Valley Country club and, in a brief introductory address, Creager outlined the years of research which preceded the successful launching of the world's first communications satellite. Telstar's success was described as a triumph for both the Bell Laboratories and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Creager described for members of Rotary and guests the problems confronting Bell scientists when a Telstar transistor became inactive due to the effect of heavy radiation. Bell's "space detectives" finally solved the "case of the ionized transistor" and returned the amazing satellite to the job of world-wide transmission of voice messages, television and pictures. L. S. White, Pacific district manager for the DuPont company, Palo Alto, Calif., will speak before the Medford Rotary club April 2 on "The Problems of Corporate Size."

Continued Support Needed for Project, Chamber Is Told

Ashland—"The Rogue basin project is by no means in the bag. It needs the continued support of everyone in the area," according to Patrick McCoy, news director of radio station KYJC in a talk before the Ashland Chamber of Commerce yesterday. He noted that Congressional authorization of the project is merely an initial step, which must be followed by appropriation of the necessary funds in order to get the project under way. "Authorization is just a license to go hunting," he commented. McCoy said public support is especially needed to secure congressional appropriations in concert with the time schedule worked out by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the bureau of reclamation. Working for Funds The Rogue Basin Flood Control and Water Resources association board is working now to secure $50,000 in engineering planning money during the 1963 fiscal year, which would permit a start in engineering planning, McCoy said. The board next is hopeful of securing an appropriation of some $365,000 planning money during fiscal 1964, which, it is hoped, would be sufficient to carry the planning to the point that an appropriation of construction funds could be secured during the 1965 fiscal year. If all goes well, McCoy said, the project could be completed by 1969 or 1970. McCoy was pinch hitting for Gerald Latham, Rogue Basin Flood Control and Water Resources board member, who was unable to attend. McCoy outlined the benefits that could be derived from the project in the areas of flood control, irrigation, enhancement of fish and wildlife, creation of a future water supply for municipalities, power generation and development of general recreation. Benefit Received He listed these areas in terms of dollars and cents of annual benefit that could be received, as follows: flood control, $1,360,000; irrigation, $925,000; fish and wildlife, $1,130,200; future water supply, $322,700; power generation, $1,681,700; and general recreation, $523,000, or a total of $6,142,600 benefit per year from the project. The project's three dams, Lost creek, Elk creek and Applegate, would reduce the flow of water during times of heavy rains and flooding, store the water and make it available during dry summer months, both for irrigation and city water supplies and for increasing the river flow. The increased flow would bring about cooler summer-time river water temperatures and thereby make it more habitable for fish, he added. Some 39,000 acres of new land could be brought under irrigation, compared to the 25,000 under irrigation at present in the basin.

Program Planned at Presentation of Fisher Fund Award

Richard Travis, Medford city councilman, will act as master of ceremonies at the program being planned by the Friends of the Library of Jackson county for the formal presentation of the Dorothy Canfield Fisher grant from the Book of the Month club to the Public Library of Medford and Jackson county, the Friends of the Library announced at a recent meeting. The Fisher grant of $1,500 for the purchase of books won by the local library is one of 10 awards given by the Book-of-the-Month club through a national competition.

Mrs. N. R. Deaver, chairman of the Friends of the Library, announced the committees who will assist in arranging the April 21 program. They are Mrs. Harry Danielson, luncheon for special guests; Mrs. R. E. Axtell, Mrs. Robert Dames, tea; Miss Claire Hanley and Omar Bacon, invitations; Mrs. George Moore and Jerry Martin, publicity; and Emil Duwe, mailing.

The award program will be given in conjunction with an open house at the Medford library to observe the opening of National Library week, April 21-27. During the open house, tours of the library will be conducted by members of the library staff.

Mrs. Marjorie Goodman, library staff member, announced that staff members are arranging noon hour stereo record concerts at the library during National Library week and invitations will be issued to downtown employees, in particular. Staff members will serve coffee. Bacon, head librarian, discussed the budget requirements for the coming year and illustrated with graphs the areas of greatest need. The resolution supporting the budget was adopted by the Library Friends and will be sent to the county court and the county budget committee.

Bacon stated that the growing quality of the library is attracting library users faster than the staff is able to care for the needs. This growth is especially evident in services to the student population. Some indexes of this increased service are school room collections, visits to the library by school classes, and requests for information from the branch librarians. Each teacher may borrow up to 40 books for a month's use, Bacon explained. These collections have increased from 40 in 1961-62 to a conservative projection of 200 for the current year, an increase of 400 per cent. In one year, the headquarters library will be host to 74 or more classes, an increase of 85 per cent.

The first eight months the rate of increase in the branch libraries was 40 per cent above a year ago.
