

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McLean

Newlywed Pair Makes Home In Cave Junction

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McLean, whose marriage was an event of March 19, made their wedding trip to Siltcoos lake on the Oregon coast and now are living at Cave Junction on the Oregon Caves highway. The bride is the former Shirley Nix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Nicholas of Cave Junction.

The bridegroom, who is from Selma, Ore., is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William McLean, Kerby, Ore.

The marriage ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock in the morning by Larry Cushing, Cave Junction justice of the peace, in his offices.

Attending the couple were Miss Kathy McLean, a sister of the bride, and Mrs. Barnett Smith.

The bride's streetlength dress was of white lace over taffeta and her accessories were white.

A reception was given at 8 o'clock the same evening by the bridegroom's parents in their home at Kerby, attended by about 25 relatives and friends of the couple. Wedding cake was served.

The bride's mother was dressed in a pink cotton frock and the bridegroom's mother wore a blue jersey print dress. Both had matching accessories.

The bride attended Selma, Calif., schools and the bridegroom, who is associated with the logging industry, attended Kerby elementary and Union High schools.

For traveling the bride wore a pink organza dress with white embossed floral pattern with pink and white accessories.

Clothing that was fashionable in the 1920's and 30's was modeled for entertainment at the 44th anniversary dinner given for members of the Medford American Legion by the auxiliary. Pictured during the event, held at the American Legion hall, are Mrs. Walter Collins, (at left) who wore a "Flapper" dress and danced the Charleston, and her mother, Mrs. Betty Fichter, wearing a wedding suit of the 1920's.

Ticking Is Clicking For Summer Fashions

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

Dallas, Tex.—(UPI)—Ticking is clicking in spring and summer fashions from Texas manufacturers.

The influence of ticking was so strong in this predominantly sports and casual wear market that other printed or woven fabrics looked like the material which once was confined to bedding.

Seersuckers for city suits were woven and printed to look like ticking. Brief tops for shorts and trousers often favored ticking stripes. Some cottons with ticking prints were splashed with overprints in vivid colors.

The 12th annual "Press Week," sponsored by the 27-member Texas Fashion Creators association was held so that members could show their new collections to visiting reporters.

Calico Is Craze

Everything from the Broadway musical "Oliver" to the ante bellum belle inspired the fashion industry in the Southwest.

To go with the ticking was the calico craze. Calico, done in polka dot, appeared in blouses paired with olive green denim or as appliques, such as a Texas longhorn with metal ring in its nose.

Tiny floral calico prints were paired with knee skimmer pants and worn under a slashed denim overskirt edged with rickrack. Bandana prints are in almost every sportswear collection.

The sailor boy look was adapted for landlubber gals in sports and town wear. These include the long, lean look of the midshipman, miles of soutache braid, sailing boat appliques, bell bottom trousers in white duck, gob hats, sailing blue denims, and mixtures of red, white and blue.

The industry pulled a lot of eye-foolers — culottes which looked like skirts, a new length on culottes, just above the knee, dresses which looked like and could double as coats, and folds or pleats down the side or center of skirts to give the effect of wrap-

Turkey Subject Of AFS Student

Ashland - Comparison of American and Turkish educational systems by Ali Saner, exchange student from Istanbul, was the subject of Friday's luncheon program of the Soroptimist club. The Turkish visitor is attending Ashland High school and while here is making his home with Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Kreisman.

The young speaker described the problems facing his countrymen and declared that only through better education will it be possible for Turkey to defeat Communism. He told of the rapid strides already made in emancipation of women, who have enjoyed equal rights with men since 1923. He gave a brief resume of agricultural modernization, saying that the economy of the country is dependent upon farming and that the principal crops are cotton and tobacco.

Ali Saner is one of 136 Turkish exchange students in the United States this year, seven of whom are in Oregon.

County Residents Invited To Join Local UN Chapter

A drive for memberships in the Jackson County chapter, in the Oregon United Nations association is now underway throughout the county.

Heading the drive is the chapter president, Fred Roy Neal, Ashland.

The county chapter was organized nine years ago and the most recent educational program undertaken by the group on the state and local level concerns the test ban of nuclear explosions.

Those who are interested in joining the chapter may contact Mrs. C. Reese Braley, membership chairman, telephone 773-7411. Those who would like to be further informed on the work of the group are asked to contact the secretary, Mrs. Wallace Robinson, telephone 772-1717, who has materials and can arrange for speakers to appear before groups.

By becoming members of the organization, persons have materials available through the educational program which will keep them constantly informed on situations brought up before the United Nations assembly in New York, and they receive the UN News published 10 times a year. This publication provides not only world-wide news but also lists foreign policy speakers, films and brochures which are available.

"Oregonians, deeply concerned for their security, are asking how serious is the question of 'fallout'? Is a test ban agreement with adequate security safeguards near completion? The local chapter urges its members and friends to make a concerted effort to keep the issue before citizens," Mrs. Neal stated.

The UN committee on the effects of atomic radiation reported that in the last year there have been as many nuclear explosions as in the preceding 17 years, while the weapons exploded have been more than 200 times as powerful as the bombs dropped in World War II, the president pointed out.

The UN delegate from Brazil has pointed out that the test ban would halt the vicious cycle, decreasing international tensions, and is a first step toward further disarmament agreements, Mrs. Neal added.

Gen. E. R. Burns, Canadian delegation spokesman at the UN headquarters, has stated that there is an urgent need of test ban to reduce the chance of nuclear war by preventing the development of these weapons by other nations than US, USSR and Great Britain. The delegate concluded his talk by stating, "The risks of evasion must be balanced against the dangers mankind must live with in the absence of an agreement."

Talent Club Officers Re-Elected

Talent-The past year's officers of Talent Federated Women's club were unanimously re-elected during the club's all-day meeting March 26.

Mrs. John Baldwin is club president; Mrs. Iva Tuggle, vice president; Mrs. Clarence Barrett, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Long, secretary and Mrs. Ray Burnette, director.

Mrs. George Goodman was elected to the board of directors to replace Mrs. Margaret Isaacs, who has moved from Talent.

Mrs. Long gave a report on a recent trip which she and Mrs. Baldwin made to the Chemawa Indian school to visit the two sisters there whom the club has adopted. Members decided to purchase the girls Easter clothing.

During the work session, with the assistance of Lions auxiliary members, the group rolled 480 cancer bandages for the American Cancer society.

Plans were discussed for the Oregon Federation district convention to be held in Talent, Wednesday, April 3.
