Conservation, Hawaiian Films Shown for Club

Norman Eveleth, forester with the Ashland district of the Rogue River National Forest, and Gordon Walker, fire control officer, showed slides on conservation to Travel Study Club of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs, last Tuesday, in the Fireplace room at the Girls Community club.

Mr. Eveleth said the film was made to make people more aware of conservation. There are many problems of conservation here in the Rogue valley, he added.

The film was made by the U. S. government and stressed the five most important elements in the forest; namely, woods, water, forage, recreation, and wildlife. He described a tree as man's best friend; the forest, a sanctuary where man may brush away his cares.

He told of the many streams and rivers of water that many years ago were usable; but today, as pollution has destroyed much use of the water.

Slides of Hawaii

Mrs. Julie Tummers gave a travelogue and showed slides of her trip to Hawaii. Pictures were shown beginning with her landing at the airport until she left for home.

The Kong's Floral Leigh garden has one of each plant which grows on the islands. Many pictures were of volcanic eruptions. The crater on the summit of Haleakala is the largest extinct crater in the world. It contains cinder cones rising as high as 900 feet. Mauna Loa and Kilauea are active volcanoes, she stated.

Much interest was shown in the Banyan tree, a large Indian tree of the mulberry family remarkable for its numerous aerial roots, which, growing down from the branches, take root in the soil and form prop roots. In this manner the tree spreads over a large area.

In comparison of the volcano craters, she showed slides of Crater Lake, the scenery resembling that of Hawaii. Also slides of Klamath river and scenes at Trail, and Shady Cove, had a resemblance to Hawaii.

Return

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Collins and their children, Bill, Alan and Betsy, have returned to their home, 2248 Dellwood avenue, Medford, after a vacation at Del Monte lodge, Pebble Beach, Calif. Mr. Collins and Bill spent much of their time golfing.

Smaller Rooms Cause Problem

New York — UP — Smaller room sizes are making it increasingly difficult to get proper proportion in interior decorating schemes, according to a New York interior designer.

Designer Jay Dorf makes these suggestions to cope with decreased space:

—Bring the eye down and keep it there. This means low scale — low-backed chairs, low tables, low everything.

—Create an illusion of height by using vertical lines, placing pictures lower on the wall and hanging light fixtures low.

—Use diminutive accessories: low and petite flower arrangements, short candelabra and candles and small-scaled lamps.

—Sculptured works and other art objects should be delicate and unobtrusive.

—Use area rugs to focus the eye on a small area, while still leaving a good deal of floor space showing.

—Keep walls and ceilings light, and alternate light and dark shades throughout the room. Use the darker shades on larger units.
