Highway Hearings Stated This Week In Jacksonville

Jacksonville - Residents of the Jacksonville area this week will be offered two opportunities to voice their feelings about the state highway department's proposed route for relocation of the Medford-Provost highway through Jacksonville.

The formal hearing will take place at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, April 4 at the city hall, but to accommodate those unable to attend an afternoon meeting, an informal hearing will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 3.

Highway department engineering and right of way personnel will be present to discuss problems of that nature with residents whose property may be affected by the project.

Through 10 Blocks - The proposed route runs roughly parallel to and south of Jackson creek, leaving the present highway at about Vine st. on the west side of town and rejoining it at about F st. on the northeast side of the city.

The route crosses Oregon st. about half way between C and D sts., crosses Third st. about half way between D and E sts., and cuts through the middle of the intersection of Fourth and F sts. Unconfirmed preliminary reports indicate that the route cuts through 10 city blocks and would involve the removal of some 14 houses.

Hoover Would Like To See New Trees Along All Highways

By DOTTIE HARBISON Mail Tribune Correspondent

Eagle Point - "I would like to see the highways clear through our county planted with two rows of trees and our recreation hills restocked with all types of nut trees and berries," Charles C. Hoover announced when he gave Redwood trees to youngsters in the Eagle Point area recently.

Hoover recalled the fun he had picking hazel nuts, pecans and other nuts when a boy exploring hills. He went on to note that "if the hills are going to be used for recreation they should have recreation in them."

Hoover said he would like to see the blackberries and huckleberries and other hearty berries planted along with the various nut trees in the surrounding hills so all youngsters and families can take advantage of enjoying them when they go into the hills for recreation.

He would also like to see an arboretum started where people can view trees from all over the world. He noted that every day he is receiving letters from people from all parts of the world offering to exchange trees with him, and it would be an ideal opportunity for the starting of such an arboretum.

At the present time, there is a two-acre tract in White City that has over 100 different varieties planted, all doing well.

This project could be accomplished in about a three year period if the trees were kept well mulched, he said. This would simplify the watering system and Hoover said he would volunteer to buy some of the trees to start it off.

Hoover suggested that some of the juveniles at the detention home and relief workers or prisoners could help take care of these trees along the highways and in the hills for the first three years, and after that they would take care of themselves.

He also volunteered his services to cut and get starts of the various trees and berries for planting along the roads and creeks and take them to granges or farmers' meetings. He noted that he had a fast growing poplar tree now that could be planted.

He also emphasized the value of Willow trees in the pasture. They require very little trimming as cattle eat them and keep them shaped level around the bottom, and they make a beautiful tree as well as a large shade tree when older, he said.

Regional Roundup

by Cleve Twitthell Mail Tribune Regional Editor

There have been some changes in our lineup of news correspondents, and so we'd like to take this opportunity to introduce two "new" members of the staff to our readers. We put the word "new" in quotes because one of the newcomers isn't really new to the Mail Tribune at all. She served as a correspondent some years ago and is now back with us. She's Alice Burnette (Mrs. Ray) of Rt. 1, Box 388, Talent (phone 535-1892. Mrs. Burnette will be covering the Talent area for us—an area that is growing in importance in the Rogue Valley, particularly with the recent formation of two new districts, the Talent Rural Fire Protection district and the South Talent Sanitary district. In addition to keeping an eye on these two districts, she'll also be filling us in on the developments in Talent's city government, particularly the progress of the city's new water program. Mrs. Burnette has been a resident of the Talent area since 1934.

Another recent addition to the staff is Mary Colley, who became our Central Point correspondent several weeks ago. Mary is the wife of Bill Colley of Bill Colley Real Estate in Central Point. She lives at 318 South Second st., and news items may be phoned to her at 664-3183. In Central Point, she is taking on a big job, for it is probably the busiest and most important territory in our regional page coverage area.

Scrivens Express Appreciation - From Velda Barr, our Prospect correspondent, comes the following:

"Mr. and Mrs. Tom Scriven of Prospect wish to express their appreciation to all of their many friends and neighbors of Prospect who helped them in their recent fire disaster, in which they lost all their belongings. The people of Prospect really gave them a helping hand. They are now living in a small cabin at the Cascade Gorge. But before long they will be rebuilding and living again in their own home. In this house fire, Mr. Scriven lost a valued gun collection, which cannot be replaced. They had just remodeled and enlarged the home that burned. They still have the payments to meet on the home they lost, and with four little boys that will be hard to do. But they thank God no one was in the house at the time. If this fire had happened at night while they were asleep it could have been disastrous."

Another Arrest On Phone Fraud

Grants Pass—William Bruce Grant, 29, of Portland and Salem, pleaded guilty in Josephine county circuit court here Friday to a charge of procuring communication service by fraud.

He was placed on probation for two years by Judge James W. Crawford.

Grant, who was arrested by Salem police Wednesday on a warrant from Grants Pass, was employed at the time of the offense by a Portland based magazine subscription firm which figured in a similar case earlier this month. The court was advised that Grant had set up a scheme to obtain sales progress reports from the Grants Pass area via long distance telephone without being charged for the service.

The case was investigated by Grants Pass police and agents of Pacific Northwest Bell under a state law enacted in 1961 to cover this type of fraud.
